Ike Returns In Triumph

Allies Support Western Big 4 Summit Plans

Small Nations Fear Possible Private Deals

PARIS (AP)—The Atlantic Pact allies gave their approval Tuesday for a series of summit meetings with the Soviet Union but some made clear they were worried about possible private deals.

The week-long round of allied conferences in Paris ended with a communique by the 15 NATO allies giving their full support to the Western Big Four summit proposals.

But before the communique was signed, delegates from half a dozen of the smaller NATO nations launched what a French spokesman called "a very long, very profound, frank and often animated discussion" of their fears of Big Four action inside the alliance.

Consultations Pledged

A NATO spokesman said the smaller countries seemed to be satisfied by assurances of U. S., British, French and West German leaders that the Allies will be consulted every step of the way to the summit.

A highly placed informant said the proposal for a series of meetings with the Soviet Union, beginning with a session in Paris in April, was motivated largely by psychological considerations.

There was no reason, he went on, to encourage people to expect too much from a single summit conference.

Pierre Baraduc, French Foreign Office spokesman, said that Belgium, Greece and Turkey led the way in expressing small-nation fears that East-West talks might become an institution with them left out in the cold.

Informed authorities reported U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter assured the NATO allies no one is planning to create an institution of summit meetings.

Future Talks Up To Soviets

Herter was reported to take the position that the proposal by the Western Big Four in no way committed them to more than the single summit meeting specifically proposed for Paris.

Herter was said to believe that future summit meetings in London, Moscow and Washington would depend on the spirit of cooperation shown by the Soviets at the first one.

President Eisenhower and the heads of the British, French and West German governments had agreed at their own Western summit meeting here over the weekend to propose an April 27 meeting with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Paris.

Letters of invitation went out to Khrushchev Sunday. The Americans, British and French told Khrushchev they were thinking in terms of a round of summit meetings in their own capitals. The first Soviet reaction was favorable.

Nehru Rejects Demands India Oust 'Invaders'

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Members of both houses of the Parliament demanded Tuesday that India throw the Chinese Communists out of disputed border regions. Prime Minister Nehru firmly rejected the demands.

Nehru warned that military action against the Chinese in the Himalayas could not be limited to small clashes but would become a major conflict, creating danger of a global war.

Therefore India will continue to try to negotiate the border dispute with Peiping, he said.

"To say negotiation will not bear fruit has no relevance. The moment you refuse to do so, you appear wrong before the world," he added.

An opposition member of the upper house asked "Are we to keep on waiting for Mr. Chou En-lai (Red Chinese Premier) to become reasonable? How long are we to go on like this? A week, or a year—or a hundred years?"

Nehru replied that he would try to negotiate. He welcomed Chou's willingness to meet and discuss their dispute. But he said he is unable to understand how Chou expected him to be ready to meet next Saturday, as Chou proposed last week.

"Whenever time is suitable I shall avail myself of the opportunity," Nehru said.

Nehru sent a reply Monday, saying he preferred to await a full exposition of the Chinese case on border claims before sitting down to discuss them.

All-White Village's Plans Dealt Setback

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP)—A federal judge issued a temporary order Tuesday restraining officials of this all-white village from interfering with construction at a proposed interracial housing development.

But he refused, pending hearing, to block Village Park Board condemnation proceedings to take over the subdivision for park purposes.

Judge Joseph Sam Perry set Dec. 31 for a hearing in U.S. District Court, Chicago, on the builder's $750,000-damage suit against the village and a number of its residents.

The suit was filed after Deerfield voters approved a $550,000-park bond issue Monday for purchase of property including 23 acres where a developer said 10 or 12 of 51 planned homes would be offered for sale to Negroes.

Winter's Bow In Northeast Brings Death

Record Snow For Date, Biting Cold Claims Nine Lives

By The Associated Press

A record snowfall for the date ushered winter into the northeastern states Tuesday. Cruel winds and biting cold brought with them misery and death.

It was the season's first real snowstorm, the worst since last February. Up to 10 inches fell in areas just north of New York City.

Temperatures went as low as eight below zero in Maine. Elsewhere they were in the low 20s. Subfreezing readings were predicted for at least the next 24 hours, and down to 10 below in northern New York.

At Least Nine Dead

At least nine persons died. Highway accidents on slippery roads claimed three lives in upstate New York and one each in Connecticut and Massachusetts. Heart attacks killed two snow shovelers in New Jersey. Falls were fatal to two victims in New Jersey and Connecticut.

School closings were general, especially in rural areas. In Metropolitan New York more than 500 schools closed.

Express highways throughout the Northeast were made dangerous by snow and ice.

Subway and airplane service was snarled in New York City. Trains ran late, buses later.

Hundreds Of Cars Abandoned

Motorists by the hundreds abandoned cars to drifting snow. Among 150 motorists stranded by the storm in Monmouth County, N.J., were three women en route to hospitals to have babies. Ambulances broke through to take the mothers to the hospitals. All arrived in time.

Winter made its official bow at 9:35 a.m. Eastern Standard Time Tuesday.

The snow began falling in New York at 2:52 p.m. Monday, ending some 16 hours later.

The official measurement at the Battery was an even seven inches. Wind piled up deep drifts in many areas.

At the storm's end, bright sun broke through over the city.

The Weather Bureau held out hope for additional snow for Christmas.

Last Civil War Vet's Rites Today

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A military procession will move slowly through downtown streets Wednesday escorting the body of Walter W. Williams, last of some four million men who took part in the Civil War.

A gleaming black hearse will bear the Confederate Army veteran on the three-mile journey from the Civil Courts Building to the South Main Baptist church for funeral services.

Williams lay in state a second day in the courthouse rotunda. Thousands filed past the marble bier where rested the one-time forage master of Hood's Brigade.

He died Saturday at the age of 117 of complications of age.

Wednesday the military procession leaves the church immediately after funeral services and makes the 125-mile journey to the old soldier's final resting place at Franklin, Tex.

Hospitalized Legless GI Facing Brighter Yuletide

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The pitiful figure with the face of a kid is thinking about Christmas.

What kind of a Christmas? Well, words can't describe it.

What kind of a Christmas would it be for you, if you were 17, in a hospital, 2,500 miles from home? If you had no legs and only one arm.

That's the kind of Christmas Albert Deblois is considering Tuesday.

Albert is a private in the Army. He was in an auto accident last June while on his first pass from Ft. Riley, Kan., where he was in basic training. He was in Fitzsimons Army Hospital here when he regained consciousness, his legs and his right arm gone.

The boy's father Arthur Deblois, Lewiston, Maine, suffered a heart attack shortly after he heard the news. Neither he nor Albert's mother, Anna Marie, has yet seen their son.

It happened a few weeks ago that Mayor Romeo Boisvert of Lewiston was here for a convention and dropped in on the young soldier.

The mayor chanced to tell his story one night to Rose Cummings, who owns the restaurant at a downtown bus depot. She later went to see Albert and spread the story to her regular customers.

Someone handed a dollar to Mrs. Cummings.

"Get something for the kid," he said. Others followed suit.

The fund grew, and Mrs. Cummings wired a money order to the Deblois in Lewiston, 2,500 miles away.

Mr. and Mrs. Deblois are coming to Denver by bus. There'll be more donations waiting for them when they get here Christmas Eve.

Mrs. Cummings will meet them. She'll drive them to Fitzsimons to see their son, who is unaware of all this.

It will be pretty special for Albert Deblois, for the kid will be 18 years old on Christmas Eve.

Steel Session Cancelled; UMW Leader Absent

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Federal Mediation Director Joseph F. Finnegan became irked Tuesday over the absence of Steelworkers President David J. McDonald and temporarily halted government efforts to settle the steel dispute.

Finnegan cancelled an afternoon mediation session because neither McDonald nor union attorney Arthur J. Goldberg showed up. He scheduled another session for Wednesday morning and served notice he expected them both to appear.

The mediation chief said there was no point in continuing mediation efforts without the union's two chief spokesmen.

Finnegan refused to answer directly when asked if his cancellation of the afternoon talks was a rebuke to union leaders. But under questioning by reporters, he said, "This is not my strike. I don't have any people out on strike."

R. Conrad Cooper, chief management negotiator, and his assistants showed up for what was to have been joint talks with union leaders Tuesday afternoon. The union sent Vice President Howard Hague and Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel.

Hague and Abel also represented the union earlier at separate union and management meetings with federal mediators. McDonald and Goldberg sent word they could not make the morning meeting because they were tied up with other business.

Union sources said they were making arrangements for company-by - company bargaining sessions set for Sunday. The "big 11" steel companies bowed Monday to the union's demand that talks be held with individual firms in addition to industry-wide negotiations.

The usually mild - mannered Finnegan said he did not receive advance notice of McDonald's intentions to stay away from the afternoon joint talks. Union sources maintained that Hague and Abel had sufficient authority to speak for the union.

Robber Gets $300,000 In Gems And Cash

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A man carrying a pistol and what he said was a vial of high explosive robbed a jewelry store Tuesday night of some $300,000 in gems and cash and kidnaped a store employe.

The robber escaped into a crowd of Christmas shoppers near Union Square in downtown San Francisco.He forced Ralph Ruthe of the store to go with him.

J. M. Browne, manager of Louis and Paul De Vries on Post Street, said the man came in shortly after 5:30 p.m.

"He had a gun and this thing, about four inches long, that he said was high explosive," Browne said. "He put a gun on Ruthe and said, 'This is a holdup. Don't move. Go to the window and take out all the merchandise.'

"There were about 110 diamond jewelry pieces, mostly rings, in the window. He took all these and other jewelry from cabinets inside the store.

"He took Mr. Ruthe as a hostage and walked him all the way up to Post and Mason (a block and a half away). Ruthe broke away and came back unharmed."

Connecticut Birth Control Laws Upheld

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—The constitutionality of two of Connecticut's 80-year-old birth control laws was upheld by the State Supreme Court of Errors Tuesday.

The ruling, which has national significance, will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The laws prohibit the use of contraceptive devices and forbids physicians from advising their use, even if conception would endanger a patient.

The Connecticut statutes had been challenged in four suits initiated at New Haven last year by Dr. C. Lee Buxton, a physician and chairman of Yale Medical School's Obstetrics Department, three of his women patients and two husbands.

The opinion came at a time when the birth control problem has taken a political turn. The attitude of presidential hopefuls toward birth control is being scrutinized in some quarters.

39 Brazilians Believed Killed In Plane Crash

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A Brazilian airliner collided with a small military plane over Rio de Janeiro Tuesday and plunged into a row of suburban homes.

At least 39 persons were believed killed. The casualties apparently included all 32 persons aboard the airliner which was carrying 26 passengers and a crew of six. Reports from the scene said a woman and her six children died in one of the homes struck by the plunging four-engine plane, a turbo-prop Viscount Vasp airliner. All of the victims were Brazilians.

Seven persons were treated for minor cuts and burns at the Getulio Vargas Hospital. All were residents of the area in which the plane fragments fell. An unidentified 11-year-old girl was held for surgery.

The pilot of the military aircraft, as yet unidentified, escaped from his shattered single - engine craft by parachute.

The wreckage rained down on a group of homes in suburban Ramos.

The airliner, on a flight from Sao Paulo to Rio, collided with the army trainer in the air above the Manguinhos private airport while on its approach to the Galeao international field on nearby Governor's Island, authorities said. The fields are less than a mile apart.

An eye-witness, Mrs. Geralda de Araujo, who lives two blocks from where the wreckage landed said at least four homes were destroyed by plane fragments.

11 Persons Injured In Train Collision

MABLETON, Ga. (UPI) — An eastbound Southern passenger train en route from Cincinnati to Atlanta collided head-on with a freight train here Tuesday injuring 11 persons.

No one was killed in the collision, which buckled both the diesel locomotives.

Witnesses said the passenger train had slowed to a speed of approximately 25 miles per hour. The freight was stopped.

Crew members in both diesels jumped shortly before impact.

Cost Of Living Hits New High But Relief Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Labor Department Tuesday announced a new high in the cost of living. It indicated the next few months may bring temporary relief from rising prices.

The department said prices rose less than one-tenth of one per cent in November to set a record for the sixth time in seven months.

In mid-November, it said, consumers paid $12.56 for a representative sampling of goods and services which cost $10 in 1947-49. In October, the price of this same package was $12.55.

Ewan Clague, commissioner of labor statistics, told reporters a continuing decline in food prices nearly offset November increases in the cost of services and big-item hard goods, notably autos.

Clague said food prices should continue downward until tags on fresh vegetables start climbing in the spring. He also forecast that auto dealers will allow progressively bigger discounts on new models as more cars are produced.

By midsummer, he said, the seasonal spurt in food prices should be over and living costs then might decline a bit.

For all of 1960, he said prices might advance about one per cent. In the past year, prices have risen 1.4 per cent.

The November increase in the price index, coupled with layoffs in some steel-short industries, clipped the buying power of factory workers by two-tenths of one per cent.

For an average family of four, after-tax earnings dropped five cents during the month to an average of $79.97 a week. Still, buying power was six-tenths of one per cent higher than a year ago, and nearly equalled the November high recorded in 1956.

Some 170,000 industrial workers will get cost-of-living pay increases on the basis of the November 1959 index level. These include 70,000 meat packers, who will get an added one cent an hour, and 55,000 aircraft workers, who will get two cents.

Huge Sparklers Add To Glitter Of Homecoming

Thousands Join In Welcoming Peace Crusader At Tour's End

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower flew home Tuesday night from an epochal mission of peace and friendship—a mission that spanned half the globe and won wide praise overseas for America's motives.

Eisenhower flew the Atlantic from a mammoth, picturesque reception in Morocco to a small but friendly welcome home to the national capital. His jet plane landed at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland, the spot where he set out Dec. 3 on his pilgrimage of peace to 11 nations on three continents.

The homecoming ceremonies at a late hour on a frosty night skipped official and military ritual and the magnificence accorded the President in distant lands.

The ceremonies centered around Mrs. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon and other top officials at the airfield, and around ordinary citizens holding aloft big dazzling sparklers in Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House.

Torchlight Parade

It was a version of the old-fashioned torchlight parade. District of Columbia commissioners bought 15,000 of the yard-long sparklers for this event for a far-roving President.

There was one break on the long flight home from Casablanca. That was a 53-minute refueling stop at Goose Bay, Labrador.

In these weeks before Christmas, Eisenhower had done what he had set out to do. To 11 nations on three continents he carried this nation's message: "Peace and friendship, in freedom." Even Communists along the way applauded that.

And now, receding into the past, but never to be forgotten, were 22,000 miles of grueling travel in 19 days, to Italy, Turkey, Pakistan, Afghanistan, India, Iran Greece, Tunisia, France, Spain and Morocco.

Casablanca, Morocco's gleaming white seaport, was Eisenhower's last place of call—for a colorful greeting.

750,000 Shriek Welcome

Something like 750,000 excited people shrieked a welcome.

As a parting gesture to Morocco, the President joined King Mohammed V in accounting an agreement on a timetable for closing the U.S. bases in this country.

The communique announcing the evacuation will be completed by 1963 means 15,000 American servicemen and their dependents will leave the five installations built in a crash program at a cost of 400 million dollars after the start of the Korean War.

After negotiations of nearly three years the United States agreed to the principle of evacuation last October, but the date had not been settled.

The Moroccans have been pressing for U.S. withdrawal since they gained freedom from France, which had granted the base rights.

The communique said the two chiefs of state are pleased at progress toward a peaceful solution of the Algerian war.

Spain, Then Morocco

This was somewhat different from the communique in which Eisenhower and President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia expressed grave concern over Algeria. After his Tunisian visit Eisenhower saw French President Charles de Gaulle, who was not pleased by the Tunisian communique.

The President flew to Morocco from Spain after a breakfast and discussion of world affairs with Generalissimo Francisco Franco in Prado Palace. Spain is host to a string of U.S. military installations which may receive the strategic bombers moved from Morocco.

In Madrid a million Spaniards gave him another stupendous welcome.

Then it was off by jet plane from Casablanca on the last leg home, with a refueling stop at Goose Bay, Labrador.

Eisenhower's plane streaked away from Casablanca 47 minutes behind schedule. The revised arrival time for Washington was between 11 and 11:30 p.m.

Triumphant Tour

If ever there was a triumphal tour this was it. Never before had an American president embarked on such a prolonged journey, some of it to lands never before visited by a U.S. president.

It was a fantastic sort of thing at times, an odyssey unsurpassed in pageantry and color.

Yet it also paid off in a measure of increased prestige for Eisenhower and for U.S. foeign policy along the southern fringes of the Iron Curtain, and perhaps in a stiffening resistance in India to Red China.

All told, probably nine million people or more turned out along a route that took the President halfway around the world. "Long live Ike," they cried, in myriad, strange tongues.

India was the turn-around mark and a spectacular high point of the trip. From richly costumed men and women down to the lowliest ragged mendicant, some four million Indians gathered for a massive, almost riotous reception.

In Afghanistan and India, Eisenhower's reception far outshone that for Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, who visited there in 1955.

U. S. Reporter On Trial Before Cuban Tribunal

PINAR DEL RIO, Cuba (AP)—A Cuban prosecutor Tuesday night demanded a 20-year prison sentence for Miami Herald reporter James Buchanan in a suddenly called pre-Christmas trial before a Castro revolutionary tribunal.

HAVANA (UPI)—A trial Tuesday night for James C. Buchanan, Miami (Fla.) Herald reporter, charged with "complicity" in the recent escape of a convicted war criminal, was announced officially here.

A military court was ordered to sit in nearby Pinar del Rio, beginning at 8 p.m. Buchanan had been moved from his cell at Cuban army intelligence headquarters in Havana, officers said. He was taken to a military jail some 30 miles to the west. It was from this jail that Austin Young, Miami soldier-of-fortune escaped briefly earlier this month.

Buchanan faces trial on charges that he helped Young escape although he was not in Cuba at the time. Young now is serving a 30-year term for conspiracy.

The army announcement came shortly after U.S. Charge d'Affaires Daniel J. Braddock at the American Embassy in Havana delivered the Cuban State Department an official request that Buchanan's trial be expedited.

The embassy announced that H. D. Kessler, a vice consul, would be present at trial proceedings to protect Buchanan's rights. Also announced as attending were Sergio Mendez Penate, an attorney from the Lazo Y Cubas law office in Havana, and John McMullan, assistant managing editor of the Herald.

Buchanan had been detained for 13 days at army intelligence headquarters. After Young's escape, Buchanan located the fugitive and interviewed him. Buchanan's arrest followed.

Herter Returns

BOSTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Christian A. Herter landed here Tuesday night after an eight hour, five-minute flight from Paris where he attended the NATO council meetings on the Western summit program.

Gilda Gray, Roaring 20s "Shimmy Queen," Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shimmy queen Gilda Gray, sex symbol of the giddy Roaring Twenties, died of a heart attack Tuesday while visiting a friend.

She collapsed at the apartment of Miss Gilda Raio on Hollywood Boulevard and was dead when an ambulance crew arrived.

The petite dancing star of Shubert musicals, Ziegfeld Follies and the silent screen was always coy about her age. Friends said she was 60.

Like F. Scott Fitzgerald, bathtub gin, near beer and other phenomena of the jazz age, Miss Gray was a symbol of that wild and wooly era—dancing in a short, spangled dress atop a speakeasy table.

And like those symbols, the 5-foot-4 blonde passed into obscurity as the depression made more and more people feel less and less like dancing on saloon tables, swigging from hip flasks and shouting, "I love my wife, but oh you kid."

She talked frequently of staging a comeback. But it never materialized. She was living in a furnished room when she died.

During her heyday she was the toast of Broadway, mingling with such Follies stars as Will Rogers and Gallagher and Sheen. Sophie Tucker took the young dancer under her wing and changed her name from "Mary Gray" to "Gilda Gray."

Al Jolson called Miss Gray "queen of the shimmy dancers." She originated the dance in a Milwaukee cafe.

Miss Gray earned four million dollars. She married and divorced three husbands and liked to say of the bygone era that gave her fame:

"They might roar more today, honey, but we had more fun."

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A military procession will move slowly through downtown streets Wednesday escorting the body of Walter W. Williams, last of some four million men who took part in the Civil War.

A gleaming black hearse will bear the Confederate Army veteran on the three-mile journey from the Civil Courts Building to the South Main Baptist church for funeral services.

Williams lay in state a second day in the courthouse rotunda. Thousands filed past the marble bier where rested the one-time forage master of Hood's Brigade.

He died Saturday at the age of 117 of complications of age.

Wednesday the military procession leaves the church immediately after funeral services and makes the 125-mile journey to the old soldier's final resting place at Franklin, Tex.

Steel Session Cancelled; UMW Leader Absent

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Federal Mediation Director Joseph F. Finnegan became irked Tuesday over the absence of Steelworkers President David J. McDonald and temporarily halted government efforts to settle the steel dispute.

Finnegan cancelled an afternoon mediation session because neither McDonald nor union attorney Arthur J. Goldberg showed up. He scheduled another session for Wednesday morning and served notice he expected them both to appear.

The mediation chief said there was no point in continuing mediation efforts without the union's two chief spokesmen.

Finnegan refused to answer directly when asked if his cancellation of the afternoon talks was a rebuke to union leaders. But under questioning by reporters, he said, "This is not my strike. I don't have any people out on strike."

R. Conrad Cooper, chief management negotiator, and his assistants showed up for what was to have been joint talks with union leaders Tuesday afternoon. The union sent Vice President Howard Hague and Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel.

Hague and Abel also represented the union earlier at separate union and management meetings with federal mediators. McDonald and Goldberg sent word they could not make the morning meeting because they were tied up with other business.

Union sources said they were making arrangements for company-by - company bargaining sessions set for Sunday. The "big 11" steel companies bowed Monday to the union's demand that talks be held with individual firms in addition to industry-wide negotiations.

The usually mild - mannered Finnegan said he did not receive advance notice of McDonald's intentions to stay away from the afternoon joint talks. Union sources maintained that Hague and Abel had sufficient authority to speak for the union.

Robber Gets $300,000 In Gems And Cash

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A man carrying a pistol and what he said was a vial of high explosive robbed a jewelry store Tuesday night of some $300,000 in gems and cash and kidnaped a store employe.

The robber escaped into a crowd of Christmas shoppers near Union Square in downtown San Francisco.He forced Ralph Ruthe of the store to go with him.

J. M. Browne, manager of Louis and Paul De Vries on Post Street, said the man came in shortly after 5:30 p.m.

"He had a gun and this thing, about four inches long, that he said was high explosive," Browne said. "He put a gun on Ruthe and said, 'This is a holdup. Don't move. Go to the window and take out all the merchandise.'

"There were about 110 diamond jewelry pieces, mostly rings, in the window. He took all these and other jewelry from cabinets inside the store.

"He took Mr. Ruthe as a hostage and walked him all the way up to Post and Mason (a block and a half away). Ruthe broke away and came back unharmed."

Connecticut Birth Control Laws Upheld

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—The constitutionality of two of Connecticut's 80-year-old birth control laws was upheld by the State Supreme Court of Errors Tuesday.

The ruling, which has national significance, will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The laws prohibit the use of contraceptive devices and forbids physicians from advising their use, even if conception would endanger a patient.

The Connecticut statutes had been challenged in four suits initiated at New Haven last year by Dr. C. Lee Buxton, a physician and chairman of Yale Medical School's Obstetrics Department, three of his women patients and two husbands.

The opinion came at a time when the birth control problem has taken a political turn. The attitude of presidential hopefuls toward birth control is being scrutinized in some quarters.

39 Brazilians Believed Killed In Plane Crash

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A Brazilian airliner collided with a small military plane over Rio de Janeiro Tuesday and plunged into a row of suburban homes.

At least 39 persons were believed killed. The casualties apparently included all 32 persons aboard the airliner which was carrying 26 passengers and a crew of six. Reports from the scene said a woman and her six children died in one of the homes struck by the plunging four-engine plane, a turbo-prop Viscount Vasp airliner. All of the victims were Brazilians.

Seven persons were treated for minor cuts and burns at the Getulio Vargas Hospital. All were residents of the area in which the plane fragments fell. An unidentified 11-year-old girl was held for surgery.

The pilot of the military aircraft, as yet unidentified, escaped from his shattered single - engine craft by parachute.

The wreckage rained down on a group of homes in suburban Ramos.

The airliner, on a flight from Sao Paulo to Rio, collided with the army trainer in the air above the Manguinhos private airport while on its approach to the Galeao international field on nearby Governor's Island, authorities said. The fields are less than a mile apart.

An eye-witness, Mrs. Geralda de Araujo, who lives two blocks from where the wreckage landed said at least four homes were destroyed by plane fragments.

11 Persons Injured In Train Collision

MABLETON, Ga. (UPI) — An eastbound Southern passenger train en route from Cincinnati to Atlanta collided head-on with a freight train here Tuesday injuring 11 persons.

No one was killed in the collision, which buckled both the diesel locomotives.

Witnesses said the passenger train had slowed to a speed of approximately 25 miles per hour. The freight was stopped.

Crew members in both diesels jumped shortly before impact.

Cost Of Living Hits New High But Relief Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Labor Department Tuesday announced a new high in the cost of living. It indicated the next few months may bring temporary relief from rising prices.

The department said prices rose less than one-tenth of one per cent in November to set a record for the sixth time in seven months.

In mid-November, it said, consumers paid $12.56 for a representative sampling of goods and services which cost $10 in 1947-49. In October, the price of this same package was $12.55.

Ewan Clague, commissioner of labor statistics, told reporters a continuing decline in food prices nearly offset November increases in the cost of services and big-item hard goods, notably autos.

Clague said food prices should continue downward until tags on fresh vegetables start climbing in the spring. He also forecast that auto dealers will allow progressively bigger discounts on new models as more cars are produced.

By midsummer, he said, the seasonal spurt in food prices should be over and living costs then might decline a bit.

For all of 1960, he said prices might advance about one per cent. In the past year, prices have risen 1.4 per cent.

The November increase in the price index, coupled with layoffs in some steel-short industries, clipped the buying power of factory workers by two-tenths of one per cent.

For an average family of four, after-tax earnings dropped five cents during the month to an average of $79.97 a week. Still, buying power was six-tenths of one per cent higher than a year ago, and nearly equalled the November high recorded in 1956.

Some 170,000 industrial workers will get cost-of-living pay increases on the basis of the November 1959 index level. These include 70,000 meat packers, who will get an added one cent an hour, and 55,000 aircraft workers, who will get two cents.

Gilda Gray, Roaring 20s "Shimmy Queen," Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shimmy queen Gilda Gray, sex symbol of the giddy Roaring Twenties, died of a heart attack Tuesday while visiting a friend.

She collapsed at the apartment of Miss Gilda Raio on Hollywood Boulevard and was dead when an ambulance crew arrived.

The petite dancing star of Shubert musicals, Ziegfeld Follies and the silent screen was always coy about her age. Friends said she was 60.

Like F. Scott Fitzgerald, bathtub gin, near beer and other phenomena of the jazz age, Miss Gray was a symbol of that wild and wooly era—dancing in a short, spangled dress atop a speakeasy table.

And like those symbols, the 5-foot-4 blonde passed into obscurity as the depression made more and more people feel less and less like dancing on saloon tables, swigging from hip flasks and shouting, "I love my wife, but oh you kid."

She talked frequently of staging a comeback. But it never materialized. She was living in a furnished room when she died.

During her heyday she was the toast of Broadway, mingling with such Follies stars as Will Rogers and Gallagher and Sheen. Sophie Tucker took the young dancer under her wing and changed her name from "Mary Gray" to "Gilda Gray."

Al Jolson called Miss Gray "queen of the shimmy dancers." She originated the dance in a Milwaukee cafe.

Miss Gray earned four million dollars. She married and divorced three husbands and liked to say of the bygone era that gave her fame:

"They might roar more today, honey, but we had more fun."

Huge Sparklers Add To Glitter Of Homecoming

Thousands Join In Welcoming Peace Crusader At Tour's End

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower flew home Tuesday night from an epochal mission of peace and friendship—a mission that spanned half the globe and won wide praise overseas for America's motives.

Eisenhower flew the Atlantic from a mammoth, picturesque reception in Morocco to a small but friendly welcome home to the national capital. His jet plane landed at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland, the spot where he set out Dec. 3 on his pilgrimage of peace to 11 nations on three continents.

The homecoming ceremonies at a late hour on a frosty night skipped official and military ritual and the magnificence accorded the President in distant lands.

The ceremonies centered around Mrs. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon and other top officials at the airfield, and around ordinary citizens holding aloft big dazzling sparklers in Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House.

Torchlight Parade

It was a version of the old-fashioned torchlight parade. District of Columbia commissioners bought 15,000 of the yard-long sparklers for this event for a far-roving President.

There was one break on the long flight home from Casablanca. That was a 53-minute refueling stop at Goose Bay, Labrador.

In these weeks before Christmas, Eisenhower had done what he had set out to do. To 11 nations on three continents he carried this nation's message: "Peace and friendship, in freedom." Even Communists along the way applauded that.

And now, receding into the past, but never to be forgotten, were 22,000 miles of grueling travel in 19 days, to Italy, Turkey, Pakistan, Afghanistan, India, Iran Greece, Tunisia, France, Spain and Morocco.

Casablanca, Morocco's gleaming white seaport, was Eisenhower's last place of call—for a colorful greeting.

750,000 Shriek Welcome

Something like 750,000 excited people shrieked a welcome.

As a parting gesture to Morocco, the President joined King Mohammed V in accounting an agreement on a timetable for closing the U.S. bases in this country.

The communique announcing the evacuation will be completed by 1963 means 15,000 American servicemen and their dependents will leave the five installations built in a crash program at a cost of 400 million dollars after the start of the Korean War.

After negotiations of nearly three years the United States agreed to the principle of evacuation last October, but the date had not been settled.

The Moroccans have been pressing for U.S. withdrawal since they gained freedom from France, which had granted the base rights.

The communique said the two chiefs of state are pleased at progress toward a peaceful solution of the Algerian war.

Spain, Then Morocco

This was somewhat different from the communique in which Eisenhower and President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia expressed grave concern over Algeria. After his Tunisian visit Eisenhower saw French President Charles de Gaulle, who was not pleased by the Tunisian communique.

The President flew to Morocco from Spain after a breakfast and discussion of world affairs with Generalissimo Francisco Franco in Prado Palace. Spain is host to a string of U.S. military installations which may receive the strategic bombers moved from Morocco.

In Madrid a million Spaniards gave him another stupendous welcome.

Then it was off by jet plane from Casablanca on the last leg home, with a refueling stop at Goose Bay, Labrador.

Eisenhower's plane streaked away from Casablanca 47 minutes behind schedule. The revised arrival time for Washington was between 11 and 11:30 p.m.

Triumphant Tour

If ever there was a triumphal tour this was it. Never before had an American president embarked on such a prolonged journey, some of it to lands never before visited by a U.S. president.

It was a fantastic sort of thing at times, an odyssey unsurpassed in pageantry and color.

Yet it also paid off in a measure of increased prestige for Eisenhower and for U.S. foeign policy along the southern fringes of the Iron Curtain, and perhaps in a stiffening resistance in India to Red China.

All told, probably nine million people or more turned out along a route that took the President halfway around the world. "Long live Ike," they cried, in myriad, strange tongues.

India was the turn-around mark and a spectacular high point of the trip. From richly costumed men and women down to the lowliest ragged mendicant, some four million Indians gathered for a massive, almost riotous reception.

In Afghanistan and India, Eisenhower's reception far outshone that for Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, who visited there in 1955.

U. S. Reporter On Trial Before Cuban Tribunal

PINAR DEL RIO, Cuba (AP)—A Cuban prosecutor Tuesday night demanded a 20-year prison sentence for Miami Herald reporter James Buchanan in a suddenly called pre-Christmas trial before a Castro revolutionary tribunal.

HAVANA (UPI)—A trial Tuesday night for James C. Buchanan, Miami (Fla.) Herald reporter, charged with "complicity" in the recent escape of a convicted war criminal, was announced officially here.

A military court was ordered to sit in nearby Pinar del Rio, beginning at 8 p.m. Buchanar had been moved from his cell at Cuban army intelligence headquarters in Havana, officers said. He was taken to a military jail some 30 miles to the west. It was from this jail that Austin Young, Miami soldier-of-fortune escaped briefly earlier this month.

Buchanan faces trial on charges that he helped Young escape although he was not in Cuba at the time. Young now is serving a 30-year term for conspiracy.

The army announcement came shortly after U.S. Charge d'Affaires Daniel J. Braddock at the American Embassy in Havana delivered the Cuban State Department an official request that Buchanan's trial be expedited.

The embassy announced that H. D. Kessler, a vice consul, would be present at trial proceedings to protect Buchanan's rights. Also announced as attending were Sergio Mendez Penate, an attorney from the Lazo Y Cubas law office in Havana, and John McMullan, assistant managing editor of the Herald.

Buchanan had been detained for 13 days at army intelligence headquarters. After Young's escape, Buchanan located the fugitive and interviewed him. Buchanan's arrest followed.

Colony Vanguard To Sail For Island On New Year's

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) —As revelers greet the new year, a creaky, 30-year-old refrigerator ship will sail from here on the midnight tide bound for the Galapagos Islands and the start of a colonizing dream.

If the ambitious plans of a 32-year-old former tugboat skipper are realized, a New Year's Eve party on the ship Alert will last a lifetime on the tropical island of San Cristobal.

Don Harrsch, president of the Island Development Co., put finishing touches on the Alert at a Tacoma drydock Tuesday, getting her ready for the 5,000-mile voyage to the island chain 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador.

Harrsch's dream is to colonize San Cristobal with 100 families from this area. Colonists must purchase one $2,500 share to join the venture. The goal is a self-sufficient economy with incomes averaging $15,000 a year.

Nine pioneers, under Harrsch's leadership, plan to leave at midnight Dec. 31 on the 30-day voyage to San Cristobal, where the development company has made a down payment on 64,000 acres of land.

"We'll pick up our families and more supplies in Los Angeles," Harrsch said. "There'll be 30 of us when we leave San Pedro."

The colony hopes to sustain itself by raising coffee, bananas and cocoa, and catching lobster, tuna and shrimp.

"Our first mission will be to catch about 40,000 pounds of lobsters and then head for San Pedro and turn them into cash," Harrsch said.

Couple Questioned In Robbery-Slaying

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — A man and a woman were being held for questioning Tuesday in the slaying of a 41-year-old market stall operator who was shot to death and robbed in front of his Catonsville home.

The couple, picked up Monday night, were not identified pending formal filing of charges.

Police reportedly are seeking a third person for questioning in the case.

George A. Langenfelder had made some deliveries after closing his market stall at 8 p. m. last Saturday night. As he got out of his car in front of his house, two shots were fired, and Langenfelder fell dead, bullet wounds in his heart and lung.

His wallet, containing an unannounced amount of money, is still missing.

Neighbors said they saw three figures walk in front of the Langenfelder car immediately after the two shots. They got into a car and drove off.

Tawes Backs Plans For New Barrett School

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. Tawes Tuesday scheduled construction of a new reformatory for Negro girls next fiscal year.

The governor included $400,000 for building a new Barrett School for Girls in his capital improvement recommendations for the Department of Public Welfare.

The department would receive a total of $781,700.

The governor noted the estimated cost of $400,000 for the new school to house 80 to 100 girls is subject to the state receiving $700,000 from Baltimore City for the old Barrett property near Friendship International Airport.

The city has sought the school site for expansion of airport facilities. Welfare Department officials also considered the school's location dangerous in light of the airport expansion plans.

The 1959 General Assembly refused to approve the integration of Barrett and the Montrose School for white girls at Reisterstown in Baltimore County.

The governor proposed $7,000 for equipping a new southern regional detention center. The department received $455,000 from the last Legislature for constructing the center, the site for which has not been determined.

Other recommendations included:

Boys' Village: $117,600. Equipping new admissions cottage, $7,100; constructing general maintenance shop, $30,000; entrance road and street lighting improvements, $15,000; building security addition to school hospital, $13,500; developing play areas for 10 cottages, $12,000; constructing two staff residences, $34,000; construction of greenhouse training project, $6,000.

Training School for Boys: $82,100. Equipping new admission cottage, $7,100; constructing roads and parking area, $25,000; stage development of senior athletic field, $50,000.

Montrose School for Girls: $35,000 for constructing service building which will include apartments for two farm employes.

Children's Center: Site improvements, including development of play court, expanding drainage facilities and street lighting and planting of trees, $20,000, and constructing wing for classrooms and gymnasium facilities, $120,000.

Washington Co. Spurns Teacher Pay Hike Bid

HAGERSTOWN (AP)— Turning down a bid for a teachers' pay increase, the Washington County commissioners said Tuesday the subject is one which should be left to the Legislature.

The commissioners noted that all but 15 cents of the $1.89 property tax rate is earmarked for county education purposes.

They rejected a proposal by the county board of education and teachers association to provide $74,000 next year for a teachers' pay raise.

Eight Men Aboard Stricken Freighter

MIAMI (UPI)—A Cuban navy vessel stood by a Dutch freighter aground on a reef off Cuba on Tuesday night while the master and seven crewmen faced a night of pounding seas.

The U.S. Coast Guard reported the vessel, the June, was in danger of breaking up any time.

Poor communication lines to the area resulted in conflicting stories of whether all eight men on the June elected to remain aboard, or whether some or all of them had been taken aboard the Cuban rescue vessel.

Agents for the vessel said earlier in Jacksonville that seven crewmen had been taken aboard the Cuban vessel, but that the master, Wilhelm De Jong, stayed aboard alone.

100 Teachers Feared Lost In Typhoon Safe

MANILA (UPI) —A group of 100 Filipino teachers feared lost at sea when typhoon Gilda hit last Friday was reported safe on shore Tuesday.

The teachers were on their way to a convention on the island of Samar from their schools at Zumarraga. Their motor launch route took them into the path of the typhoon, and the launch was feared sunk when no word was heard and it failed to reach Samar.

But Samar constabulary commander Lt. Col. Simplicio Cristobal told the Philippines News Service Tuesday that the teachers returned to Zumarraga after a close brush with 120-mile-an-hour winds.

Youths Acquitted In Golf Course Rape-Slaying

BALTIMORE (AP)—Two judges Tuesday acquitted Edward A. Moulsdale, 23, and James O.Hare Jr., 19, in the golf course rape and slaying of a 57-year-old grandmother.

Moulsdale and Hare were accused in the murder of Mrs.Ethel Francis, whose nude and battered body was found in August, 1958, between two fairways of the municipal Clifton Park golf course.

Judges Edwin Harlan and Michael J. Manley, who heard the trial two weeks ago in Baltimore Youth Court, ruled that the state had not proved its case against either Moulsdale or Hare beyond a reasonable doubt.

For 13 months the two youths were regarded as key witnesses in the slaying. They were the persons at first identified by police only as "two boys on bicycles" who had told of seeing a swarthy man chase Mrs. Francis on the golf course shortly before the killing.

They became suspects in the Francis slaying last September when they were picked up in connection with a young girl's rape complaint. Moulsdale still faces a charge of rape in that case and Hare is charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Judges Harlan and Manley noted that the state had produced statements by the two defendants each accusing the other of the Francis killing.

This and other evidence, they ruled, "does give rise to a suspicion that the defendants . . . or one of them, did commit the rape and murder of Mrs. Francis."

"Suspicion, however, cannot serve as the basis for a conviction," they concluded their eight-page opinion.

The two judges also referred to FBI reports showing that the only hair fragment found in the fingernail scrapings of the dead woman was "of Negro origin," while the principals in the case were white.

Q. What is this new way of building?

A. Chrysler Corporation's virtually trouble-free version of unit construction. Body and undersills are joined in a single unit of enormous strength, locked by close to 5400 welds. In Dura-Quiet Unibody, there is no frame and no conventional body bolts, struts, braces, etc., to loosen and rattle.

Q. What about power and performance?

A. There's the new 30-D Economy Six, a new "inclined" six that delivers outstanding economy in normal driving. The standard V-8 is the Fury V-800 which three times in a row topped its class in the Mobilgas Economy Run. Or you may choose the extra-cost SonoRamic Commando V-8.

100 Teachers Feared Lost In Typhoon Safe

MANILA (UPI) —A group of 100 Filipino teachers feared lost at sea when typhoon Gilda hit last Friday was reported safe on shore Tuesday.

The teachers were on their way to a convention on the island of Samar from their schools at Zumarraga. Their motor launch route took them into the path of the typhoon, and the launch was feared sunk when no word was heard and it failed to reach Samar.

But Samar constabulary commander Lt. Col. Simplicio Cristobal told the Philippines News Service Tuesday that the teachers returned to Zumarraga after a close brush with 120-mile-an-hour winds.

Youths Acquitted In Golf Course Rape-Slaying

BALTIMORE (AP)—Two judges Tuesday acquitted Edward A. Moulsdale, 23, and James O.Hare Jr., 19, in the golf course rape and slaying of a 57-year-old grandmother.

Moulsdale and Hare were accused in the murder of Mrs.Ethel Francis, whose nude and battered body was found in August, 1958, between two fairways of the municipal Clifton Park golf course.

Judges Edwin Harlan and Michael J. Manley, who heard the trial two weeks ago in Baltimore Youth Court, ruled that the state had not proved its case against either Moulsdale or Hare beyond a reasonable doubt.

For 13 months the two youths were regarded as key witnesses in the slaying. They were the persons at first identified by police only as "two boys on bicycles" who had told of seeing a swarthy man chase Mrs. Francis on the golf course shortly before the killing.

They became suspects in the Francis slaying last September when they were picked up in connection with a young girl's rape complaint. Moulsdale still faces a charge of rape in that case and Hare is charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Judges Harlan and Manley noted that the state had produced statements by the two defendants each accusing the other of the Francis killing.

This and other evidence, they ruled, "does give rise to a suspicion that the defendants . . . or one of them, did commit the rape and murder of Mrs. Francis."

"Suspicion, however, cannot serve as the basis for a conviction," they concluded their eight-page opinion.

The two judges also referred to FBI reports showing that the only hair fragment found in the fingernail scrapings of the dead woman was "of Negro origin," while the principals in the case were white.

This car is built a new solid way by Chrysler Corporation engineers. It is precisely put together and simply doesn't have many parts that work loose and need fixing in some cars. We'd like to answer some questions about this car now:

Q. What is this new way of building?

A. Chrysler Corporation's virtually trouble-free version of unit construction. Body and undersills are joined in a single unit of enormous strength, locked by close to 5400 welds. In Dura-Quiet Unibody, there is no frame and no conventional body bolts, struts, braces, etc., to loosen and rattle.

Q. What about power and performance?

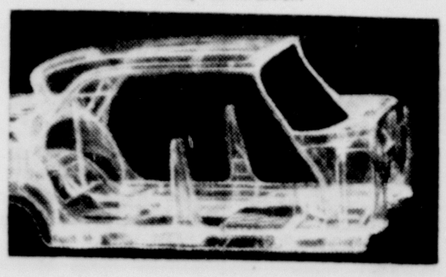
A. There's the new 30-D Economy Six, a new "inclined" six that delivers outstanding economy in normal driving. The standard V-8 is the Fury V-800 which three times in a row topped its class in the Mobilgas Economy Run. Or you may choose the extra-cost SonoRamic Commando V-8.

If you ask us, this is the best built, best performing low-price car of all. Give it a real try soon, won't you?

Body and frame are welded as one unit with Dura-Quiet Unibody construction.



A Chrysler-engineered product, built a new solid way to give you solid satisfaction.

William F. Hilgenberg, 56, State Banking Commissioner, Dies

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — William F. Hilgenberg, 56-year-old state banking commissioner, died Tuesday after collapsing in the hallway of his home at nearby Mago Vista.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Anne Arundel General Hospital at 9:35 a.m. County Medical Examiner Dr. Elmer G. Linhardt said an autopsy would be performed in Baltimore to determine the exact cause of death.

His wife summond an ambulance to take him to the hospital. A member of the Earleigh Heights ambulance crew said Hilgenberg was found fully clothed and apparently had been stricken while preparing to leave the house.

He operated a seafood business in Baltimore and long had been active in state Democratic circles and city civic affairs. He was a former president of the city fire board.

Gov. Tawes ordered all state flags flown at half staff in tribute to Hilgenberg.

Tawes, in a statement, said he was "stunned and saddened beyond measure" to learn of his death. "I have lost one of my best friends. The State of Maryland has lost one of its finest citizens."

He named Hilgenberg to a four-year term as state banking commissioner, effective last June 1, succeeding William H. Kirkwood Jr. of Baltimore.

Hilgenberg also had a residence in Baltimore in addition to his home at Mago Vista, a community on the Magothy River north of here.

Safety Seat Belts For State Cars

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. Tawes agrees with the state police and Health Dept. that safety seat belts should be used in state-owned cars.

The two state departments suggested last week to Tawes that the safety belts be installed in official cars providing the users of those cars agreed to use the belts properly.

Tawes said Tuesday he would instruct department heads to honor all requests that the belts be installed in the state cars.

Farmers Plan 11% Cut In Pig Crop Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP)—Farmers plan a sharp reduction of 11 per cent in the 1960 crop of pigs, influenced apparently by a big drop in prices this year.

The Agriculture Department reported Tuesday a survey shows that a crop of 52,000,000 head is in prospect compared with 58,607,000 produced last spring.

The reduction will be reflected in marketings for slaughter — and in prices — during the late summer, fall and early winter of 1960.

Shorter supplies normally bring firmer prices.

The department also reported that this year's fall crop totaled 43,029,000, an increase of 2 per cent over the 1958 fall crop of 42,163,000 head.

The 1959 fall pig crop compared with the 1958 fall crop respectively, for major producing states, including:

Maryland 152,000 for the 1959 crop and 144,000 for the 1958 fall crop; Virginia 569,000 and 533,000.

B&O Names Holter

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad announced Tuesday that Raymond H. Holter, general passenger agent for 13 years, has been named general freight agent.

Carroll E. Romney, formerly chief of the rate bureau of the passenger department, was appointed Holter's successor.

$3.60 Tax Rate For Baltimoreans

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimoreans will pay a $3.60 tax rate next year to help balance a 253-million-dollar city budget.

The rate per $100 is 26 cents higher than the present levy and would have been even greater without some last-minute adjustments in revenue estimates.

The need for additional property tax money arose despite a 76-million dollar reduction in the budget. Most of the decrease resulted from plans to spend 61 million dollars less in building construction and other capital improvements, including some partly financed by the federal government.

Seeks AEC Contract

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Fluor Corp. said it is seeking from the Atomic Energy Commission a contract to provide the architectural and engineering services on a six million dollars experimental organic-cooled atomic reactor to be built near Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Javelin Is Fired Into Space By ABL Engines

Scientists at Allegany Ballistics Laboratory, Pinto, played a part in the four-stage rocket fired into space at Wallops Island, Va., to record signals emanating from the stars.

Officials at ABL said yesterday the Javelin, a high altitude probe, fired Monday in Virginia, used a launching vehicle of which all four stages were solid-propellant rockets developed at the ABL plant, a Navy facility operated by Hercules Powder Company.

The rocket was set to reach a height of 560 miles, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington said it could not say immediately the exact height the rocket reached, but it apparently "went good." The rocket was in flight for about 18 minutes and came down in the Atlantic about 600 miles from the Virginia coastal island.

The complicated rocket incorporated a new X248 engine as its fourth stage, and the experiment also was to test how this worked in the vacuum of space.

Officials of ABL said the first stage was the Booster rocket from the Army's Honest John artillery weapon. The second and third stages each consisted of a Nike booster used by the Army in the Nike anti-aircraft missile system.

The fourth stage, also developed at the local plant, was a high performance rocket which consisted of a glass filament reinforced plastic case, containing an advanced cast double-base solid-propelled system.

The rocket was developed at ABL for space experimental projects under the direction of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

This was the sixth successful space project which used this type of solid-propellant rocket. The first success came in October of 1958 as America's second Lunar probe, which went 71,000 miles into space.

Then followed the highly publicized "paddlewheel" satellite, the Vanguard, a previous Javelin and the recent 100-foot balloon (Operation Shot Put).

Pinto Bridge Views Sought

County Commissioner John T. Mason informed the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday of a letter he has received from John B. Funk, chairman-director of the Maryland State Roads Commission pertaining to the Pinto Bridge across the Potomac River in the vicinity of Allegany Ballistics Laboratory.

Funk wrote Mason that he had written to Patrick C. Graney of the West Virginia Road Commission on the bridge matter.

Funk told Graney that in view of the desire for a new bridge, which has again been indicated in strong fashion, the State of Maryland would like to know if West Virginia would be in a position to finance its portion of such a project.

In his communication to the West Virginia official, Funk stated that the bridge would also involve the B&O Railroad and Western Maryland Railway as they have tracks which run along the river and the bridge structure would necessarily be of the overhead type. The two railroads would participate in the program as a grade crossing elimination plan.

Cost of such a structure would be in the neighborhood of $850,000, according to Funk's letter. Allegany County has been responsible for part of the maintenance of the bridge with West Virginia assuming a half share.

There has been much agitation for the State of Maryland to take over the responsibility of Allegany County for the Pinto bridge on the grounds it is an interstate structure.

County Health Department To Move

The Allegany County Board of Commissioners announced yesterday that office space on the second floor of the Union Street County building now occupied by six groups rent-free will be taken over for the County Health Department.

Commissioner John J. Rowan, president of the board, said the affected groups would be requested to obtain other quarters. They include the Cancer Society, Heart Association, Tuberculosis Association, Alcoholics Anonymous and one room used by the Red Cross.

"The commissioners regret the necessity of the move, but the Health Department needs the space and the county board does not feel it should pay approximately $3,400 for rental of the second floor of the Public Safety building from the City of Cumberland to the detriment of the county taxpayers," Rowan added.

In addition to the rental costs the county would also have to pay for all utilities, janitor service and maintenance of the elevator in the Public Safety building.

The commissioners have had drawings made of the second floor area of the Union Street County building which outlines how the space will be used. Office space used by the Maryland Veterans Commission and Vocational Rehabilitation organization is paid for by the state.

The commissioners point out that by utilizing the Union Street structure they will not have additional costs for heat and utilities and janitor service as these services are presently being provided.

Two High Chairs Are Yule Gift To Memorial

The Civinettes gave two metal high chairs to the pediatric department of Memorial Hospital and at a later date will give two to Sacred Heart Hospital.

Plans were formulated at the dinner meeting held at the Fort Cumberland Hotel, with Mrs. Catherine Armbruster presiding. Last year's Christmas gift to the hospital was one chair. Mrs. Ruth Moore was welcomed as a new member. Reports on the candy sale and proceeds from the sale of tickets for the antique show were given. The next meeting is scheduled for January 28 at the home of Mrs. Clifford Minke, Lynn Street.

Others present were Mrs. Mary Margaret Rowan, Mrs. Mary Jane Minke, Mrs. Evelyn Collins and Mrs. Roseann Blake.

The paint in the rock-cut temple of Ipsambul, Nubia, apparently is as bright as when it was put on some four thousand years ago.

Rheumatic fever causes more deaths in the first two decades of life than all other communicable diseases taken together.

HOSTESSES FOR YULE TEA—Members of the home economics class of Fort Hill High School entertained members of the faculty and officials at the annual tea earlier in the week at the school. It was held in the dining room of the homemaking department.

Grove 11 Has Party

Queen City Grove 11 of the Supreme Forest Woodman Circle held a combined Christmas dinner and jingle party Saturday evening at Nave's Dining Room. Mrs. Alberta Lindner presided. Reports on the sale of homemade candy and cookies were given. Also on the "lavender and lace boxes" sent to the home for the aged and orphanage at Sherman, Texas.

Santa, portrayed by Joseph Spero, visited the group and distributed gifts. Jingles were exchanged. Approximately 13 attended.

The next meeting will be January 15 at the WOW home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller and daughters, Oldtown Road, are spending the holidays in California.

Associated Women To Receive Report

Mrs. Roy Shryock Sr. and Mrs. Edgar Matthews, president and vice president, respectively, of the Allegany County Unit of the Associated Women of the Farm Bureau, attended the 41st annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Association in Chicago. They will give their reports at the county meeting January 26.

"A Free America Up To You," was the theme of the women's meeting, and will be stressed in the local program, Mrs. Shryock said last evening. "Toward New Frontiers" was the convention theme.

Speakers included Charles B. Shuman, president of the national group; Mrs. Haven Smith, vice president of the American CA Women of the World; Harry F. Byrd, John J. McClellan, senators from Virginia and Arkansas; John W. Byrnes, Wisconsin representative; and Carlos P. Romulo, ambassador from the Philippines. Entertainment consisted of the Frisco Four from "The Music Man" and talent finds of the young people in the nation.

Donations Made

A donation of $601 for the Lottie Moon Christmas offering was reported and cash was given to buy clothing for a needy infant at the meeting of the Christine Garnett Mission Circle of First Baptist Church, recently.

It was announced that the WMU focus week, Western District Association meeting and a prayer meeting are scheduled for early January.

Society Elects

Mrs. Oletta Foster was elected president of the Altar Society of St. Luke's Lutheran Church recently. Other officers are Mrs. Marion Sine, vice president; Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, secretary; and Mrs. Katherine Dunmire, treasurer.

'Space Safari' Set Late In January

CHICAGO (AP) — The University of Chicago's "safari into space" — the biggest scientific projcet ever undertaken to study the behaviour of extremely high-energy cosmic rays—will be made late in January, it was announced Sunday.

The scientists will send the world's largest balloons more than 20 miles up—to the edge of space—and keep them there for the longest possible periods of time to record the cosmic ray bombardment from space.

One of the balloons to be used —taller than a 41-story skyscraper—was successfully tested last week when it was released in South Dakota and landed in Mississippi.

Gas Prices Drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gasoline prices, normally weak at this season, are under more pressure than is usual in many parts of the country. Some mid-continent refiners sliced ¼ cent a gallon off wholesale quotations for branded gasoline this week. Last week, Gulf coast suppliers trimmed motor fuel prices a similar amount.

If you want your Christmas photographs and snapshots to reflect the most attractive you, do as the models do and reassure yourself on the state of your grooming by checking the last minute details before the shutter begins to click. Attend to the wispy ends of hair, the set of your dress, the shine on your nose, and the crispness of your lip line. Then, don't fuss with them again; forget them entirely and your eyes will lose their harried expression.

To make sure that your eyes will look alive in your picture, and as interested and as interesting as they should, practice these Powers Girls' techniques. (If you do, they will never betray any lack of confidence about your ability to assume a graceful and poised pose when you face the camera.)

1. Never start at any object or person. If the man behind the camera asks you to look at some object, say a clock on the wall, beware that you don't let your eyes bore two holes into it. Try not to look at just one point, like the hands or numbers. Instead, make a real effort to see the entire clock. You'll be surprised at how well you can do this if you look just a little past or beyond the focal object.

2. Never look so high or far to either side that a great deal of the whites of your eyes show on the camera side. As an example, suppose on an outdoor shot, you were asked to look up at a tree. If you look up with just your eyes, your pupils will practically disappear and the lower half of the white will be overemphasized. You can counteract this by lifting your face just a little upward toward the tree so your eyes won't have to do all the reaching.

3. Always smile with your eyes. You'll learn how if you try this experiment in front of your mirror: Actually pout with your mouth, but practice making your eyes smile until you look as though you are smiling all over your face. It is a trick worth knowing for many occasions besides a pointer for your picture!

'Space Safari' Set Late In January

CHICAGO (AP) — The University of Chicago's "safari into space" — the biggest scientific projcet ever undertaken to study the behaviour of extremely high-energy cosmic rays—will be made late in January, it was announced Sunday.

The scientists will send the world's largest balloons more than 20 miles up—to the edge of space—and keep them there for the longest possible periods of time to record the cosmic ray bombardment from space.

One of the balloons to be used —taller than a 41-story skyscraper—was successfully tested last week when it was released in South Dakota and landed in Mississippi.

Gas Prices Drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gasoline prices, normally weak at this season, are under more pressure than is usual in many parts of the country. Some mid-continent refiners sliced ¼ cent a gallon off wholesale quotations for branded gasoline this week. Last week, Gulf coast suppliers trimmed motor fuel prices a similar amount.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN: What can I do with a husband who steals? No matter where he works he comes home with merchandise, tools, machinery, wire, all sorts of odds and ends from the company.

When I get mad he says, "They don't pay me what I'm worth. This helps even things up." Or, "They'll never miss it. They have plenty down there."

He's been employed at three different plants in the last 10 years and has done the same thing at every one. I was never quite clear on why he was let out at the last place.

I'm afraid the children will learn his ways and it's making me sick. Our eldest boy is 11 and he's already asking questions. Please suggest something. —DEEPLY CONCERNED

Dear Deeply Concerned: Millions of dollars worth of tools and supplies "disappear" annually from factories, stores and offices all over the country. The alibis are always the same — the ones your husband gives.

These rationalizations are pure nonsense. If a man thinks he isn't being paid enough he should get another job. Stealing is no way to get even.

Since your husband is giving you the "logic" routine tell him to paste THIS in his hatband:

People who take things from places of employment are common, ordinary thieves. Over a period of years the percentages are strongly in favor of being caught. Ask him if it would be worth all the equipment in the factory to be fired for stealing. Ask how he'd like to be prosecuted in a court of law and wind up with a besmirched name to hand down to his son.

DEAR ANN: A bunch of squares in our school are trying to pass a code of behavior which includes boys wearing long-sleeve shirts and ties to classes.

Who in the Sam Hill wants to dress up every day like for a funeral? And what has a guy's clothes got to do with behavior anyway? Help help! The creeps are closing in. We need someone to speak for us. How about it?—ANTI-SQUARESVILLE

DEAR ANTI-SQUARESVILLE: Sorry, Boys, you rattled the wrong cage. I believe the way a boy dresses has a lot to do with his behavior. It's unlikely that a kid in a shirt and tie will get into a fist fight or slide down a bannister.

Open throats, tight jeans and beltless pants are o.k. for a hayride or cowpunchin', but school deserves a more dignified get-up.

Boys who LOOK like gentlemen usually act that way. I'm for this part of the code and I hope it passes.

DEAR ANN: I was happy (and relieved) to learn in your column today that someone else is married to a man who walloped her around during her sleep. This woman said she didn't mind because she reasoned her husband used to sleep with his brother Leonard and he got into the habit of slugging in his sleep, in self defense.

I, however, married a man who had no brother Leonard. The first three months of our marriage found me with constant bruises, shiners and even a dislocated jaw. During the night I was frequently awakened by an elbow crashing down on my head. I would yell and he'd wake up with a startled "What happened?"

One night he found out what happened. I got out of bed, swung from the heels and cracked him square on the jaw as he had done me. He has never hit me in his sleep since.—MADAME SNOOZE

The argonaut, or paper nautilus, is an octopuslike creature that sails the sea in a shell boat. The arms of the female have glands which secrete calcium carbonate, forming a delicate, pearly-white, fluted shell to hold her eggs. Female argonauts grow up to a foot in length, but the males seldom exceed half an inch.

During the declarers early huddle, East had taken time to do some thinking of his own.

The bidding and the appearance of his own hand rendered it out of consideration that West held an entry in diamonds and besides, if the contract were to be defeated, West must hold a high club and, what is more to the point, he must hold it after the spade suit has become established.

When the club was led from dummy, East was prepared and promptly rose with the ace to return a spade, establishing the suit. As for the further management of the hand, the declarer's mental processes had followed the same course. If West held the guarded queen of clubs, there was no hope. If East held the queen, there could be no harm in letting him have it. Every effort must be made to keep West out of the lead. On this line of reasoning, declarer played the king of clubs and great was the fall thereon. He was able to run off with 11 tricks.

When the club was led from dummy, East was prepared and promptly rose with the ace to return a spade, establishing the suit. As for the further management of the hand, the declarer's mental processes had followed the same course. If West held the guarded queen of clubs, there was no hope. If East held the queen, there could be no harm in letting him have it. Every effort must be made to keep West out of the lead. On this line of reasoning, declarer played the king of clubs and great was the tall thereon. He was able to run off with 11 tricks.

What Will Be The Future Of NATO?

"Allies no longer feel the same compulsion to submerge differences as when they faced together a clear and present danger."

This apt description of the principal reason behind the quarrels and frictions now dividing the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was set forth nearly four years ago by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. In a speech of remarkable candor before the annual Associated Press meeting in New York City, April 23, 1956, Dulles warned that NATO was approaching a critical stage.

Recalling the sense of common danger which led to formation of the alliance in 1949, Dulles observed that, with the changes in Soviet tactics then in evidence, there was "no longer the mood of fear" which had made "the fearful draw together and seek the protection of collective strength." The moment of greatest danger, he said, would be "the moment when we relax."

Unquestionably, the new look in Soviet foreign policy has helped to sap vigor from the largely military NATO alliance. Given the elements of the Russian peace offensive, changing military technology, and Western Europe's economic recovery, the many present differences within the alliance could have been expected.

To help stem the tide toward disintegration of the shield, Secretary of State Christian A. Herter on December 13 expressed a view that certainly would be seconded by his predecessor. Arriving in Paris for a meeting of the NATO Council of Foreign Ministers—which reconvened after a recess for the Western "summit" meeting — Herter declared: "It remains to be seen whether the Soviet Union is prepared to negotiate seriously to reach equitable settlements on major issues. It would be a grave error to base our plans for the future on a more optimistic appraisal than is warranted by the facts."

These Days

The Television Problem

The television business is in a scandal for many reasons that this industry does not like to recognize. The real difficulty is that right from the start, radio became a government-controlled operation and television is radio with pictures. The laws that apply to radio apply to television, only more so.

To put it simply, at least two independent agencies of the government control or to put it more accurately, have the power to control television, the Federal Communications Commission, and the Federal Trade Commission. The wave lengths on which television operates are the property of the government of the United States and were so declared by the initial law on the subject which was established during the administration of the Department of Commerce by Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce. The wave lengths are not leased to the networks or stations; licenses to operate are granted by the Federal Communications Commission under certain stipulations.

The Federal Trade Commission comes into the picture because of its authority to supervise advertising, to prevent the advertiser from swindling the public by false statements, false claims, malicious statements, etc. The Federal Trade Commission is often lax in its supervision largely because it is too slow in processing a matter but that is characteristic of bureaucracy anyhow.

This fixes definitely and beyond question the final responsibility for what happens on radio and television which differs from the press because the First Amendment to the Constitution guarantees the press from government interference. There cannot be a similar guarantee for radio and television because they operate on government licenses.

The only similarity between radio and television and the press is that radio and television try, as a feature, to provide news and comment among the many programs of a strictly theatrical nature.

In this field, radio, in particular, performs a valuable service. It can bring immediate and urgent news more rapidly to the public than the newspapers can. It also is an excellent medium for debate and discussion. Television has never developed the full capabilities in this field and on the whole, has displayed less imagination than might have been expected. This is due to the fact that it has not been able to earn as much from that type of program as it has received from quiz shows, murders and Westerns. There was a time when comedy and vaudeville did very well on television. The greatest in this field was Milton Berle.

Both radio and television live by advertisements, as do newspapers and magazines. However, in a newspaper or magazine, the advertisement is separated from the other contents. One may read continuously without being interrupted by the advertisement or vice versa. It is known, for instance, that some readers, women in particular, will read advertisements in newspapers before they read anything else. To them, advertisements are news.

On the other hand, in television the advertisement interferes with the continuity of a story. For instance, in a murder, a climax is reached. The next scene should begin the unravelling of the plot. The viewer is tense. Who really done the murder? However, what comes on is a sweet, angelic little girl who honestly brushes her teeth every day with ixnay tooth cream. That is why so many viewers now have blab-offs; that is, devices which cut off the voice during advertisements or when they want to answer the telephone. The blab-off can eventually destroy the television business.

As an alternative, it is being suggested that those who are willing to pay for television shows without advertising be permitted to do so. This means that they ought to be permitted to pay for what they see. Pay television is not popular which is not unexpected because most people reason that if you can get something for nothing, why pay for it?

But it would be logical to have two kinds of television, the free and the selective. Those who do not mind seeing "Romeo and Juliet" disturbed in the middle of a tragic scene by a pair of twirling rock-n-rollers singing the virtues of a cigarette can have it free and those who want a continuous performance can pay for it. In the long run, somebody has to pay for a show, on the basic theory that in this life you get nothing for nothing.

Interview With Nehru Was Worth The Trouble Of Getting To India

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson has now managed to interview most of the heads of state Eisenhower saw on his trip, in advance of Eisenhower. Today he tells the rest of the story of his long drive from Afghanistan to interview Premier Nehru in India.)

EN ROUTE—Indian music has never greatly appealed to me. It is high-pitched, scratchy, and sad. And as I stood behind the big iron gate barring the road between India and Pakistan at 7 p. m. with a loudspeaker from the troop barracks blaring Indian music out over the night, it was especially depressing.

The palm trees, the bougainvillea climbing over the barbed-wire stockade, the tropical night were beautiful, but not to one who had to catch the 7:30 Frontier Mail from Amritsar to New Delhi in order to keep an appointment with Prime Minister Nehru of India—the last interview in the series I had to get before the arrival of President Eisenhower.

The Pakistanis had let me across their part of the border after only about 15 minutes of palaver, but now—I stood on the wrong side of the Indian barricade and the Indian gramophone blared on.

Finally they let me in. Then for the first time I got a break. The Frontier Mail, I learned, did not leave at 7:30, but at 8:40. I asked immediately that they call a taxi to come out from Amritsar, allegedly 15 minutes away.

Indian Bureaucrats

Then proceeded the most detailed cross-examination and inspection I have ever had. Last year I entered Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania, all Communist countries. Their border inspection was brief and easy compared with that of friendly India.

I explained that I had an appointment to meet the Prime Minister of India. It made no difference. They still wanted to know why I carried two watches, how much money I had on me, what I was doing with an Afghan prayer rug. It took almost an hour to satisfy the meticulous bureaucrats at the Indian border. Meanwhile I had been asking them about the taxi that was supposed to come out from Amritsar. They assured me it had been ordered, but I suspect it hadn't; because it didn't put in an appearance until 8:25 p. m., with the train due to leave at 8:40.

I got on the phone to the Amritsar station master and asked him to hold the train. He said he would. My baggage was piled into the taxi and we sped off. Down the three-lined, deserted highway through the tropical night we raced at breakneck speed. The driver did his best. However, the station was not 15 minutes, but 30 minutes away and we arived at 9 p. m.

The last train to New Delhi had departed.

By Truck To Delhi

The only way I could keep my appointment with Nehru was to drive all night, and I made inquiries about taxis. They were not promising. It was a 10-hour drive and the taxis were old. Finally I started out in what was described as a "good taxi." My suspicions were aroused when I found it cranked by hand. I became even more suspicious when I found the driver bought only five gallons of gas for a 10-hour trip, and when our top speed was only 30 miles an hour. I ordered him back to town.

Eventually I learned that two men connected with the U. S. Information Service were planning to drive a truck loaded with USIS equipment to New Delhi the next morning. So at 1:30 a. m., I woke them up and asked if they wouldn't like to get started a little early.

There's a lot of difference between 1:30 a. m. and 7 a. m., but they didn't hesitate. They got dressed and we left for Delhi soon after 2.

Mr. Veal Parkash Setti and Mr. Basil A. Martyr had been showing a motion picture film, "Not by Bread Alone," to Indian audiences all week in the neighborhood of Amritsar. Their truck, loaded with motion picture equipment and other gear, was heavy. But I have never seen more expert or willing drivers; nor did anyone ever have a more grateful passenger.

We went thundering through the Indian night, miraculously avoiding bullock carts, donkeys, camels and pedestrians until shortly after sun-up we arrived in New Delhi. I even had time to shave before going to see Prime Minister Nehru.

More Red Tape

Ordinarily that would be the end of the story. But it isn't. The interview, as most with Nehru, was fully worth the 800-mile drive from Afghanistan. I wrote it up and sent it to the Indian telegraph office. It came back. My press card, hitherto valid in every country of the world, was not good in India. I had to get a special press card. But it was Saturday and I could not get one until Monday.

So my long drive from Afghanistan was for nothing.

I went to the Minister of Information, O. I. Rahman. He reminded me that I had done India a great favor. He had been in Washington during the war when I had published the secret report of Ambassador William Phillips recommending independence for India.

"You were of great help in getting us independence," he said.

"Then you can be of great help in getting this cable sent," I suggested.

The Minister of Press picked up various telephones, called various people. We sat almost an hour while he called people regarding the simple matter of reversing charges on a press telegram, which in most countries would take five minutes. In India everyone passed the buck.

Finally I said: "You have just said I was of some help in hastening Indian independence. Now I am trying to send a cable about your Prime Minister. It's a good interview and will help Indian-American relations. Yet your government throws up enough red tape to make me wonder whether you deserved independence. Why don't you have one of your assistants get in the car with me and go to the cable office and we'll send the cable?"

Mr. Rahman complied. But this again does not quite end the story. Americans, I found, can be just as inefficient as Indians. My syndicate in New York had neglected to arrange for the relay of the cable, so the interview with Nehru, despite a long drive from Afghanistan to get it, did not get published until two days late.

Sequel To The General's Secret Memorandum

By Joseph Alsop

PARIS

The same ghost has haunted the meeting of the leaders of the West that haunted and deeply troubled the preliminary meeting of the NATO Council. The secret memorandum written by General de Gaulle in 1958 has become a powerful specter, which will never cease to haunt the councils of the Western allies until something is done about it.

The facts concerning this document have never been accurately set down. Yet they are essential to a clear understanding of most of the recent developments here. In brief, then, the facts are as follows:

Over a year ago, not long after he came to power, General de Gaulle personally penned his reflections on the organization of the Western Alliance and his claims for reforms. This memorandum, which he composed in solitude, without staff advice, was then sent off to just four persons, President Eisenhower, British Prime Minister Macmillan, the NATO Supreme Commander, General Lauris Norstad, and the Secretary General of NATO, Paul Henri Spaak.

The memorandum was primarily intended to assert France's absolute equality with the other leading powers of the West. To this end, de Gaulle asked for the establishment of "a directory" of NATO composed of Britain, France and the United States.

The memorandum suggested that the existence of this three-power directory or controlling group should be expressed in "an organic manner." The memorandum further claimed for the directory the right to be consulted about the use of any atomic or thermonuclear weapon anywhere in the world. And it based all these claims on the fact that France, Britain and the United States were the only NATO nations with "worldwide responsibilities."

Initially, this document was like a bombshell tossed into the inner circles of the West. Perhaps because his antique, marmoreal French lent itself to misinterpretation, de Gaulle seemed to be demanding the complete revision of NATO's whole policy-making structure. Worse still, he seemed to be asking for transfer of control of the American nuclear deterrent to his new three-power international committee. This latter feature brought the Pentagon close to apoplexy.

For these reasons, the de Gaulle memorandum got a dusty answer. The sequel was the series of moves by de Gaulle that have caused so much controversy at the meetings here - - - the refusal to permit medium range ballistic missiles to be emplaced in France; the withdrawal of the French contingent from NATO's Mediterranean fleet; the attack on NATO's principle of military integration; and the resistance to an integrated air defense.

It is an open secret that General de Gaulle has acted in all these cases on his own initiative, without the enthusiastic support of the French military professionals and sometimes against their advice. Some of the positions he has taken, like the resistance to an integrated air defense, have even seemed close to irrational.

But this whole mystifying and potentially very dangerous line of action begins to make sense, if it is seen as a flank attack by de Gaulle to force more serious consideration of the ideas contained in the rejected secret memeorandum. This is now the interpretation of the wiser Western leaders and NATO policy-makers.

Meanwhile, de Gaulle's secret memorandum has also been clarified or amended (it is difficult to say which) by the subsequent explanation offered in private by the General himself. In asking for a directory, he has said he did not mean to establish a new ruling group above the NATO organization. He meant, rather, to obtain a return to the old system of intimate, constant, frank discussion of all serious issues, which was used by American, British and French policymakers for the first decade after the war.

Again, he has said that he did not mean to ask for a right of veto over the use of American nuclear power anywhere on the face of the globe. He meant, rather, to insure that France would be informed and consulted before A-bombs were dropped.

As to the desirability of restoring the former intimacy and frankness between the leading Western powers, there can be no doubt at all. The old system began to weaken when John Foster Dulles and Charles E. Wilson took over the State and Defense Departments. Suez caused the system's total collapse.

Ever since Suez, the Western Alliance has suffered sadly because the old intimate system was not working any longer. Eventually, it must and will be restored, but with Germany newly included in the inner circle, as is necessary and inevitable. The strongest guardian of NATO's institutions, Secretary General Spaak, has himself declared that the whole machine would work far more easily and efficiently "if the great powers would only speak with one voice."

The other question raised in the de Gaulle memorandum, the question of the deterrent, is vastly more difficult. But it is at least plain that changes in American unclear policy are now on the way. In fact American policymakers on the very highest level are already talking of transferring from American control to NATO control "the keys to the cupboard" that hold NATO's stock of nuclear weapons. Thus the de Gaulle memorandum, however upsetting its language, at least indicated a direction which the Western allies are likely to follow in the end.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

INTERPRETERS — The language barrier has always been an important factor in the conduct of foreign affairs, but it was emphasized recently when Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's interpreter considerably softened some of the Russian leader's more acid comments on his American tour.

Undoubtedly there will be more of this during Eisenhower's travels to Moscow some time next spring. There is an amusing and true story concerning interpreters that occurred when Calvin Coolidge was President in the mid-1920s.

Ferenc Molnar, the celebrated Hungarian playwright, paid a call on Coolidge, accompanied by the Hungarian minister to Washington, who acted as interpreter.

Coolidge started the conversation off by asking Molnar to comment on Hungary's economic situation. Molnar, who knew nothing about the subject, told the minister that he would tell an engaging story in Hungarian, and that the minister could comment on economics while appearing to interpret.

It was a great opportunity for the Hungarian diplomat. He explained Hungary's situation in great detail and wound up by asking for a U. S. loan.

No one doubts the truth of the story. Molnar, an honorable man, told it himself.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

It was Christmas Eve and the soldier and the girl came in out of the little wisps of white, he, stomping his feet in the vestibule and hanging his heavy coat and uniform cap on the rack, and she, removing her gloves, but keeping the coat on open.

They stopped at Sullivan's Lodge in Spring Lake and, rubbing their hands and sniffing against the cold, walked into the big oval bar. They stared at the gallery of photos on the wall and peeked into the dining room, empty at 4 p. m. The piano was mute, and needed the fingers of Al Kenny to make it sing.

He was a young soldier, a big-shouldered, big-eyed kid with blue on his jowls. She was tiny and dark, a plain girl with the eyes of a nervous mouse. Lennie Martin, the bartender, smiled and said: "What'll it be?" and the soldier looked at the girl and said he guessed a little sherry for the girl and an Old-Fashioned on the rocks for him.

There were two other customers at the big bar. The old man had come in laden with bundles, and with the help of his wife, had set the gift packages down on an adjoining stool. Then he had smiled at Lennie and said: "Two J and B's with soda, please." They had been sipping their drinks, and swapping small nothings with the bartender, when the soldier had come in with the girl.

Lennie went back to polishing glasses, working the towel deep inside and spinning it and then holding it up to look at it through the lights. Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan had come downstairs, a slender figure with a mouth that laughs and eyes that weep, and she told Lennie that the rooms upstairs were pretty well booked. If any more reservations came in, refer them to her.

The soldier ordered another drink for himself, but nothing for the girl. He got Lennie's attention and called him over. The soldier leaned away from the girl to whisper in confidence. He asked if he and the girl could have one of the rooms upstairs. Lennie said he didn't think so. The soldier was persistent. "We only want to stay a night or two," he said softly. Lennie looked at the boy and looked at the girl. She had turned her head away.

"I'm sorry," he said to the soldier. "You're in the wrong place, bud. I mean, the Sullivans are—well, you know—family people."

He went to the opposite side of the bar, still polishing the glass. He told the old man the story and the old man said that the soldier had some nerve. This, he said, was the kind of a case the M.P's should know about. The old woman listened to them and shook her head. Lennie said that the lodge was booked up anyhow; Mrs. Sullivan had just told him.

The old lady got up from her stool and smiled across the bar to the young girl. She went around the bar and took the kid by the hand and led her off to the ladies' rest room. The old man watched them go. "That's my old woman for you," he said to Lennie. "Always into everybody's business but her own. Now she'll give that kid a lecture and the girl will tell her to stick to her own knitting." He pushed the empty glass toward Lennie. "Make it a double," he said.

The soldier watched the girl disappear, and then he saw the old lady come out and go for Mrs. Sullivan. The owner's wife went into the rest room. After awhile, she came out and spoke to Lennie.

"Al Kenny wants to stay over tonight. Call him and tell him I have to use his room." Lennie nodded. "You going to give them a room?" he said. She looked at the bartender and shook her head yes. She went back to the rest room.

"As you say," Lennie said to the old man, "you can't figure women. If I rented one of the upstairs rooms to these kids, I'd get my head handed to me. Now all of a sudden, it's different. They're in."

The old lady came out and sat down beside her husband. "Don't ever preach to me again," he said grumpily. "You're not so holy yourself." She stirred the drink with her finger. "It turned out just as I thought," she said. "He's stationed at Fort Monmouth and they're having their first baby. She came all the way from Ohio to be with him and now he has the doctor and everything arranged, but no place to stay."

Lennie set the glass down. The old man studied his drink. His wife patted him on the arm forgivingly. "When you come right down to it," she said, "it's the oldest story in the world: No room at the Inn." . . .

Raynaud's Disease Usually Is Not Serious

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Raynaud's disease is suspected in persons whose fingers and toes turn ghostly white on exposure to cold or following emotional stress. Spasm lasts as long as exposure continues. When the sufferer returns to a warm room or becomes calm, the skin blanches, reddens, and burns but resumes its normal color within a few minutes.

These episodes are more annoying than serious and the majority of victims learn to live with their ailment and enjoy it as a conversation piece. The condition becomes worse in some cases but circulation rarely is reduced to such an extent that a finger or toe is lost.

The waxy pallor is caused by spasms of the small blood vessels of the fingers or toes. It is normal for the hands and feet to become cold when exposed to frigid weather but many high-strung, nervous individuals, especially women, also have cold hands and feet even though sitting quietly in a warm room.

But the circulation of the Raynaud's syndrome sufferer is overly sensitive to cold and emotional changes. A severe spasm of the blood vessels occurs on chilling or excitement. It is an inherent trait with which the affected man and woman must learn to live.

The majority will get along well by protecting their extremities from cold and injury. They must dress warmly during the winter, including the use of fur or wool lined gloves. Only a few need a change in occupation or climate to prevent the disease from progressing. A tranquilizer or psychiatric care is recommended when the attacks are precipitated by emotional outbreaks.

Drugs that dilate blood vessels are used, especially when the disease is troublesome. Among such prescription products are Priscoline, Arlidin, Dibenzyline, Illidar, and Inversine. When one remedy fails or produces unpleasant side effects, another may be recommended. An ointment containing a vasodilator also is available. It is rubbed on the skin of each toe or finger. Surgery (sympathectomy) is needed occasionally when simpler measures fail and the condition is becoming progressively worse.

TOMORROW: Pregnancy span.

ARTERIES AND STRAIN

T. W. writes: Does working under an emotional strain cause hardening of the arteries?

REPLY

This is a moot question because the exact cause of hardening of the arteries is not known. Emotional strain could contribute, however, if it raises the blood pressure and blood cholesterol levels. These conditions coexist frequently with arteriosclerosis.

DEODORANT SOAPS

A. R. writes: Will a young man who works in an office suffer any ill effects from using deodorant soaps once or twice daily in bathing?

REPLY

No. Some deodorant soaps mask odors by substituting a stronger smelling chemical. Others contain a special antiseptic that kills odor producing germs on the skin.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Telephone nquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

A Paris correspondent wrote up a swanky reception attended by numerous princes, counts, dukes and their ladies. One guest who was new in those parts sought the bar. "Looking for something?" asked an elderly gentleman courteously.

"Yes," said the stranger. "A bourbon." The elderly gentleman bowed and asked. "Would a Hapsburg do?"

The committee to clean up the town posted notices in prominent places demanding: "Did you make our city dirty today?" Some miscreant pencilled at the bottom of one of those notices, "On the contrary: our city made me dirty today!"

A confirmed jackass who would drive his racing car while drunk, begged for, and received, one last jigger of whisky. "Okay, now," nodded the cynical bartender, "you've had one for the road. Would you like one more for the ditch?"

"Why?" inquired a boy's mother, "are you so set against having an alarm clock next to your bed, so you can get to school on time mornings?"

"It's because," said sonny, "I simply hate that sort of ding."

What Will Be The Future Of NATO?

"Allies no longer feel the same compulsion to submerge differences as when they faced together a clear and present danger."

This apt description of the principal reason behind the quarrels and frictions now dividing the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was set forth nearly four years ago by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. In a speech of remarkable candor before the annual Associated Press meeting in New York City, April 23, 1956, Dulles warned that NATO was approaching a critical stage.

Recalling the sense of common danger which led to formation of the alliance in 1949, Dulles observed that, with the changes in Soviet tactics then in evidence, there was "no longer the mood of fear" which had made "the fearful draw together and seek the protection of collective strength." The moment of greatest danger, he said, would be "the moment when we relax."

Unquestionably, the new look in Soviet foreign policy has helped to sap vigor from the largely military NATO alliance. Given the elements of the Russian peace offensive, changing military technology, and Western Europe's economic recovery, the many present differences within the alliance could have been expected.

To help stem the tide toward disintegration of the shield, Secretary of State Christian A. Herter on December 13 expressed a view that certainly would be seconded by his predecessor. Arriving in Paris for a meeting of the NATO Council of Foreign Ministers—which reconvened after a recess for the Western "summit" meeting — Herter declared: "It remains to be seen whether the Soviet Union is prepared to negotiate seriously to reach equitable settlements on major issues. It would be a grave error to base our plans for the future on a more optimistic appraisal than is warranted by the facts."

The Television Problem

The television business is in a scandal for many reasons that this industry does not like to recognize. The real difficulty is that right from the start, radio became a government-controlled operation and television is radio with pictures. The laws that apply to radio apply to television, only more so.

To put it simply, at least two independent agencies of the government control or to put it more accurately, have the power to control television, the Federal Communications Commission, and the Federal Trade Commission. The wave lengths on which television operates are the property of the government of the United States and were so declared by the initial law on the subject which was established during the administration of the Department of Commerce by Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce. The wave lengths are not leased to the networks or stations; licenses to operate are granted by the Federal Communications Commission under certain stipulations.

The Federal Trade Commission comes into the picture because of its authority to supervise advertising, to prevent the advertiser from swindling the public by false statements, false claims, malicious statements, etc. The Federal Trade Commission is often lax in its supervision largely because it is too slow in processing a matter but that is characteristic of bureaucracy anyhow.

This fixes definitely and beyond question the final responsibility for what happens on radio and television which differs from the press because the First Amendment to the Constitution guarantees the press from government interference. There cannot be a similar guarantee for radio and television because they operate on government licenses.

The only similarity between radio and television and the press is that radio and television try, as a feature, to provide news and comment among the many programs of a strictly theatrical nature.

In this field, radio, in particular, performs a valuable service. It can bring immediate and urgent news more rapidly to the public than the newspapers can. It also is an excellent medium for debate and discussion. Television has never developed the full capabilities in this field and on the whole, has displayed less imagination than might have been expected. This is due to the fact that it has not been able to earn as much from that type of program as it has received from quiz shows, murders and Westerns. There was a time when comedy and vaudeville did very well on television. The greatest in this field was Milton Berle.

Both radio and television live by advertisements, as do newspapers and magazines. However, in a newspaper or magazine, the advertisement is separated from the other contents. One may read continuously without being interrupted by the advertisement or vice versa. It is known, for instance, that some readers, women in particular, will read advertisements in newspapers before they read anything else. To them, advertisements are news.

On the other hand, in television the advertisement interferes with the continuity of a story. For instance, in a murder, a climax is reached. The next scene should begin the unravelling of the plot. The viewer is tense. Who really done the murder? However, what comes on is a sweet, angelic little girl who honestly brushes her teeth every day with ixnay tooth cream. That is why so many viewers now have blab-offs; that is, devices which cut off the voice during advertisements or when they want to answer the telephone. The blab-off can eventually destroy the television business.

As an alternative, it is being suggested that those who are willing to pay for television shows without advertising be permitted to do so. This means that they ought to be permitted to pay for what they see. Pay television is not popular which is not unexpected because most people reason that if you can get something for nothing, why pay for it?

But it would be logical to have two kinds of television, the free and the selective. Those who do not mind seeing "Romeo and Juliet" disturbed in the middle of a tragic scene by a pair of twirling rock-n-rollers singing the virtues of a cigarette can have it free and those who want a continuous performance can pay for it. In the long run, somebody has to pay for a show, on the basic theory that in this life you get nothing for nothing.

Sequel To The General's Secret Memorandum

By Joseph Alsop

PARIS

The same ghost has haunted the meeting of the leaders of the West that haunted and deeply troubled the preliminary meeting of the NATO Council. The secret memorandum written by General de Gaulle in 1958 has become a powerful specter, which will never cease to haunt the councils of the Western allies until something is done about it.

The facts concerning this document have never been accurately set down. Yet they are essential to a clear understanding of most of the recent developments here. In brief, then, the facts are as follows:

Over a year ago, not long after he came to power, General de Gaulle personally penned his reflections on the organization of the Western Alliance and his claims for reforms. This memorandum, which he composed in solitude, without staff advice, was then sent off to just four persons, President Eisenhower, British Prime Minister Macmillan, the NATO Supreme Commander, General Lauris Norstad, and the Secretary General of NATO, Paul Henri Spaak.

The memorandum was primarily intended to assert France's absolute equality with the other leading powers of the West. To this end, de Gaulle asked for the establishment of "a directory" of NATO composed of Britain, France and the United States.

The memorandum suggested that the existence of this three-power directory or controlling group should be expressed in "an organic manner." The memorandum further claimed for the directory the right to be consulted about the use of any atomic or thermonuclear weapon anywhere in the world. And it based all these claims on the fact that France, Britain and the United States were the only NATO nations with "worldwide responsibilities."

Initially, this document was like a bombshell tossed into the inner circles of the West. Perhaps because his antique, marmoreal French lent itself to misinterpretation, de Gaulle seemed to be demanding the complete revision of NATO's whole policy-making structure. Worse still, he seemed to be asking for transfer of control of the American nuclear deterrent to his new three-power international committee. This latter feature brought the Pentagon close to apoplexy.

For these reasons, the de Gaulle memorandum got a dusty answer. The sequel was the series of moves by de Gaulle that have caused so much controversy at the meetings here - - - the refusal to permit medium range ballistic missiles to be emplaced in France; the withdrawal of the French contingent from NATO's Mediterranean fleet; the attack on NATO's principle of military integration; and the resistance to an integrated air defense.

It is an open secret that General de Gaulle has acted in all these cases on his own initiative, without the enthusiastic support of the French military professionals and sometimes against their advice. Some of the positions he has taken, like the resistance to an integrated air defense, have even seemed close to irrational.

But this whole mystifying and potentially very dangerous line of action begins to make sense, if it is seen as a flank attack by de Gaulle to force more serious consideration of the ideas contained in the rejected secret memeorandum. This is now the interpretation of the wiser Western leaders and NATO policymakers.

Meanwhile, de Gaulle's secret memorandum has also been clarified or amended (it is difficult to say which) by the subsequent explanation offered in private by the General himself. In asking for a directory, he has said he did not mean to establish a new ruling group above the NATO organization. He meant, rather, to obtain a return to the old system of intimate, constant, frank discussion of all serious issues, which was used by American, British and French policymakers for the first decade after the war.

Again, he has said that he did not mean to ask for a right of veto over the use of American nuclear power anywhere on the face of the globe. He meant, rather, to insure that France would be informed and consulted before A-bombs were dropped.

As to the desirability of restoring the former intimacy and frankness between the leading Western powers, there can be no doubt at all. The old system began to weaken when John Foster Dulles and Charles E. Wilson took over the State and Defense Departments. Suez caused the system's total collapse.

Ever since Suez, the Western Alliance has suffered sadly because the old intimate system was not working any longer. Eventually, it must and will be restored, but with Germany newly included in the inner circle, as is necessary and inevitable. The strongest guardian of NATO's institutions, Secretary General Spaak, has himself declared that the whole machine would work far more easily and efficiently "if the great powers would only speak with one voice."

The other question raised in the de Gaulle memorandum, the question of the deterrent ,is vastly more difficult. But it is at least plain that changes in American unclear policy are now on the way. In fact American policymakers on the very highest level are already talking of transferring from American control to NATO control "the keys to the cupboard" that hold NATO's stock of nuclear weapons. Thus the de Gaulle memorandum, however upsetting its language, at least indicated a direction which the Western allies are likely to follow in the end.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

INTERPRETERS — The language barrier has always been an important factor in the conduct of foreign affairs, but it was emphasized recently when Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's interpreter considerably softened some of the Russian leader's more acid comments on his American tour.

Undoubtedly there will be more of this during Eisenhower's travels to Moscow some time next spring. There is an amusing and true story concerning interpreters that occurred when Calvin Coolidge was President in the mid-1920s.

Ferenc Molnar, the celebrated Hungarian playwright, paid a call on Coolidge, accompanied by the Hungarian minister to Washington, who acted as interpreter.

Coolidge started the conversation off by asking Molnar to comment on Hungary's economic situation. Molnar, who knew nothing about the subject, told the minister that he would tell an engaging story in Hungarian, and that the minister could comment on economics while appearing to interpret.

It was a great opportunity for the Hungarian diplomat. He explained Hungary's situation in great detail and wound up by asking for a U. S. loan.

No one doubts the truth of the story. Molnar, an honorable man, told it himself.

Raynaud's Disease Usually Is Not Serious

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Raynaud's disease is suspected in persons whose fingers and toes turn ghostly white on exposure to cold or following emotional stress. Spasm lasts as long as exposure continues. When the sufferer returns to a warm room or becomes calm, the skin blanches, reddens, and burns but resumes its normal color within a few minutes.

These episodes are more annoying than serious and the majority of victims learn to live with their ailment and enjoy it as a conversation piece. The condition becomes worse in some cases but circulation rarely is reduced to such an extent that a finger or toe is lost.

The waxy pallor is caused by spasms of the small blood vessels of the fingers or toes. It is normal for the hands and feet to become cold when exposed to frigid weather but many high-strung, nervous individuals, especially women, also have cold hands and feet even though sitting quietly in a warm room.

But the circulation of the Raynaud's syndrome sufferer is overly sensitive to cold and emotional changes. A severe spasm of the blood vessels occurs on chilling or excitement. It is an inherent trait with which the affected man and woman must learn to live.

The majority will get along well by protecting their extremities from cold and injury. They must dress warmly during the winter, including the use of fur or wool lined gloves. Only a few need a change in occupation or climate to prevent the disease from progressing. A tranquilizer or psychiatric care is recommended when the attacks are precipitated by emotional outbreaks.

Drugs that dilate blood vessels are used, especially when the disease is troublesome. Among such prescription products are Priscoline, Arlidin, Dibenzyline, Illidar, and Inversine. When one remedy fails or produces unpleasant side effects, another may be recommended. An ointment containing a vasodilator also is available. It is rubbed on the skin of each toe or finger. Surgery (sympathectomy) is needed occasionally when simpler measures fail and the condition is becoming progressively worse.

TOMORROW: Pregnancy span.

ARTERIES AND STRAIN

T. W. writes: Does working under an emotional strain cause hardening of the arteries?

REPLY

This is a moot question because the exact cause of hardening of the arteries is not known. Emotional strain could contribute, however, if it raises the blood pressure and blood cholesterol levels. These conditions coexist frequently with arteriosclerosis.

DEODORANT SOAPS

A. R. writes: Will a young man who works in an office suffer any ill effects from using deodorant soaps once or twice daily in bathing?

REPLY

No. Some deodorant soaps mask odors by substituting a stronger smelling chemical. Others contain a special antiseptic that kills odor producing germs on the skin.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

A Paris correspondent wrote up a swanky reception attended by numerous princes, counts, dukes and their ladies. One guest who was new in those parts sought the bar. "Looking for something?" asked an elderly gentleman courteously.

"Yes," said the stranger. "A bourbon." The elderly gentleman bowed and asked. "Would a Hapsburg do?"

The committee to clean up the town posted notices in prominent places demanding: "Did you make our city dirty today?" Some miscreant pencilled at the bottom of one of those notices, "On the contrary: our city made me dirty today!"

A confirmed jackass who would drive his racing car while drunk, begged for, and received, one last jigger of whisky. "Okay, now," nodded the cynical bartender, "you've had one for the road. Would you like one more for the ditch?"

"Why?" inquired a boy's mother, "are you so set against having an alarm clock next to your bed, so you can get to school on time mornings?"

"It's because," said sonny, "I simply hate that sort of ding."

Interview With Nehru Was Worth The Trouble Of Getting To India

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson has now managed to interview most of the heads of state Eisenhower saw on his trip, in advance of Eisenhower. Today he tells the rest of the story of his long drive from Afghanistan to interview Premier Nehru in India.)

EN ROUTE—Indian music has never greatly appealed to me. It is high-pitched, scratchy, and sad. And as I stood behind the big iron gate barring the road between India and Pakistan at 7 p. m. with a loudspeaker from the troop barracks blaring Indian music out over the night, it was especially depressing.

The palm trees, the bougainvillea climbing over the barbed-wire stockade, the tropical night were beautiful, but not to one who had to catch the 7:30 Frontier Mail from Amritsar to New Delhi in order to keep an appointment with Prime Minister Nehru of India—the last interview in the series I had to get before the arrival of President Eisenhower.

The Pakistanis had let me across their part of the border after only about 15 minutes of palaver, but now—I stood on the wrong side of the Indian barricade and the Indian gramophone blared on.

Finally they let me in. Then for the first time I got a break. The Frontier Mail, I learned, did not leave at 7:30, but at 8:40. I asked immediately that they call a taxi to come out from Amritsar, allegedly 15 minutes away.

Indian Bureaucrats

Then proceeded the most detailed cross-examination and inspection I have ever had. Last year I entered Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania, all Communist countries. Their border inspection was brief and easy compared with that of friendly India.

I explained that I had an appointment to meet the Prime Minister of India. It made no difference. They still wanted to know why I carried two watches, how much money I had on me, what I was doing with an Afghan prayer rug. It took almost an hour to satisfy the meticulous bureaucrats at the Indian border. Meanwhile I had been asking them about the taxi that was supposed to come out from Amritsar. They assured me it had been ordered, but I suspect it hadn't; because it didn't put in an appearance until 8:25 p. m., with the train due to leave at 8:40.

I got on the phone to the Amritsar station master and asked him to hold the train. He said he would. My baggage was piled into the taxi and we sped off. Down the three-lined, deserted highway through the tropical night we raced at breakneck speed. The driver did his best. However, the station was not 15 minutes, but 30 minutes away and we arived at 9 p. m.

The last train to New Delhi had departed.

By Truck To Delhi

The only way I could keep my appointment with Nehru was to drive all night, and I made inquiries about taxis. They were not promising. It was a 10-hour drive and the taxis were old. Finally I started out in what was described as a "good taxi." My suspicions were aroused when I found it cranked by hand. I became even more suspicious when I found the driver bought only five gallons of gas for a 10-hour trip, and when our top speed was only 30 miles an hour. I ordered him back to town.

Eventually I learned that two men connected with the U. S. Information Service were planning to drive a truck loaded with USIS equipment to New Delhi the next morning. So at 1:30 a. m., I woke them up and asked if they wouldn't like to get started a little early.

There's a lot of difference between 1:30 a. m. and 7 a. m., but they didn't hesitate. They got dressed and we left for Delhi soon after 2.

Mr. Veal Parkash Setti and Mr. Basil A. Martyr had been showing a motion picture film, "Not by Bread Alone," to Indian audiences all week in the neighborhood of Amritsar. Their truck, loaded with motion picture equipment and other gear, was heavy, but I have never seen more expert or willing drivers; nor did anyone ever have a more grateful passenger.

We went thundering through the Indian night, miraculously avoiding bullock carts, donkeys, camels and pedestrians until shortly after sun-up we arrived in New Delhi. I even had time to shave before going to see Prime Minister Nehru.

More Red Tape

Ordinarily that would be the end of the story. But it isn't. The interview, as most with Nehru, was fully worth the 800-mile drive from Afghanistan. I wrote it up and sent it to the Indian telegraph office. It came back. My press card, hitherto valid in every country of the world, was not good in India. I had to get a special press card. But it was Saturday and I could not get one until Monday.

So my long drive from Afghanistan was for nothing.

I went to the Minister of Information, O. I. Rahman. He reminded me that I had done India a great favor. He had been in Washington during the war when I had published the secret report of Ambassador William Phillips recommending independence for India.

"You were of great help in getting us independence," he said.

"Then you can be of great help in getting this cable sent," I suggested.

The Minister of Press picked up various telephones, called various people. We sat almost an hour while he called people regarding the simple matter of reversing charges on a press telegram, which in most countries would take five minutes. In India everyone passed the buck.

Finally I said: "You have just said I was of some help in hastening Indian independence. Now I am trying to send a cable about your Prime Minister. It's a good interview and will help Indian-American relations. Yet your government throws up enough red tape to make me wonder whether you deserved independence. Why don't you have one of your assistants get in the car with me and go to the cable office and we'll send the cable?"

Mr. Rahman complied. But this again does not quite end the story. Americans, I found, can be just as inefficient as Indians. My syndicate in New York had neglected to arrange for the relay of the cable, so the interview with Nehru, despite a long drive from Afghanistan to get it, did not get published until two days late.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

It was Christmas Eve and the soldier and the girl came in out of the little wisps of white, he, stomping his feet in the vestibule and hanging his heavy coat and uniform cap on the rack, and she, removing her gloves, but keeping the coat on open.

They stopped at Sullivan's Lodge in Spring Lake and, rubbing their hands and sniffing against the cold, walked into the big oval bar. They stared at the gallery of photos on the wall and peeked into the dining room, empty at 4 p. m. The piano was mute, and needed the fingers of Al Kenny to make it sing.

He was a young soldier, a big-shouldered, big-eyed kid with blue on his jowls. She was tiny and dark, a plain girl with the eyes of a nervous mouse. Lennie Martin, the bartender, smiled and said: "What'll it be?" and the soldier looked at the girl and said he guessed a little sherry for the girl and an Old-Fashioned on the rocks for him.

There were two other customers at the big bar. The old man had come in laden with bundles, and with the help of his wife, had set the gift packages down on an adjoining stool. Then he had smiled at Lennie and said: "Two J and B's with soda, please." They had been sipping their drinks, and swapping small nothings with the bartender, when the soldier had come in with the girl.

Lennie went back to polishing glasses, working the towel deep inside and spinning it and then holding it up to look at it through the lights. Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan had come downstairs, a slender figure with a mouth that laughs and eyes that weep, and she told Lennie that the rooms upstairs were pretty well booked. If any more reservations came in, refer them to her.

The soldier ordered another drink for himself, but nothing for the girl. He got Lennie's attention and called him over. The soldier leaned away from the girl to whisper in confidence. He asked if he and the girl could have one of the rooms upstairs. Lennie said he didn't think so. The soldier was persistent. "We only want to stay a night or two," he said softly. Lennie looked at the boy and looked at the girl. She had turned her head away.

"I'm sorry," he said to the soldier. "You're in the wrong place, bud. I mean, the Sullivans are—well, you know—family people."

He went to the opposite side of the bar, still polishing the glass. He told the old man the story and the old man said that the soldier had some nerve. This, he said, was the kind of a case the M.P's should know about. The old woman listened to them and shook her head. Lennie said that the lodge was booked up anyhow; Mrs. Sullivan had just told him.

The old lady got up from her stool and smiled across the bar to the young girl. She went around the bar and took the kid by the hand and led her off to the ladies' rest room. The old man watched them go. "That's my old woman for you," he said to Lennie. "Always into everybody's business but her own. Now she'll give that kid a lecture and the girl will tell her to stick to her own knitting." He pushed the empty glass toward Lennie. "Make it a double," he said.

The soldier watched the girl disappear, and then he saw the old lady come out and go for Mrs. Sullivan. The owner's wife went into the rest room. After awhile, she came out and spoke to Lennie.

"Al Kenny wants to stay over tonight. Call him and tell him I have to use his room." Lennie nodded. "You going to give them a room?" he said. She looked at the bartender and shook her head yes. She went back to the rest room.

"As you say," Lennie said to the old man, "you can't figure women. If I rented one of the upstairs rooms to these kids, I'd get my head handed to me. Now all of a sudden, it's different. They're in."

The old lady came out and sat down beside her husband. "Don't ever preach to me again," he said grumpily. "You're not so holy yourself." She stirred the drink with her finger. "It turned out just as I thought," she said. "He's stationed at Fort Monmouth and they're having their first baby. She came all the way from Ohio to be with him and now he has the doctor and everything arranged, but no place to stay."

Lennie set the glass down. The old man studied his drink. His wife patted him on the arm forgivingly. "When you come right down to it," she said, "it's the oldest story in the world: No room at the Inn." . . .

LaSalle Cops 7th Straight; Fort Hill, Allegany Lose

Valley High Loses 56-51 To Explorers

Firlie Scores 25 Points, Scaletta, Garlitz Get 20

By TED TROXELL

Mike Firlie, LaSalle's brilliant backcourt man who has been a key figure in the fashioning of the Explorers' winning streak, last night led his team to a 56-51 victory over an upset-minded Valley High quint at SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium.

The usually hot shooting Irish were somewhat off their floor game, but cashed in on 18 of 21 foul attempts and got the major share of their scoring from Firlie and Mickey Scaletta in picking up their seventh straight win of the campaign. Valley's record now stands at two wins and three losses.

Firlie Rings Up 25

Firlie, who specializes in stealing the ball when the opponent is on the attack, pulled several timely thefts last night which he converted into scoring plays, and also hit with consistency from outside. He connected on nine of 16 tries from the floor and had a 7-8 night from the free throw line to wind up with 25 points.

Four of Firlie's foul conversions came in the last 37 seconds, when Valley was trying desperately to pull the game out of the fire after trailing all the way.

At one point in the final frame, the Cumberlanders led by a nine-point margin, but Bill Garlitz and Jimmy Getty hit hot streaks and began blistering the nets to pull the Lonaconing quint to within two points (50-48) with slightly less than a minute remaining.

This is when the battle really got hectic. Both clubs fouled frequently, and when a name-calling session developed between Firlie and Garlitz, referee Enordo "Moose" Arnone called a double technical foul and banished both players from the game.

Valley Trails By Two

In all, nine points were scored in the span of 54 seconds, all but two of them coming at the foul line. Garlitz converted one of two attempts to make the score 50-48, then Firlie came back with a pair of charity tosses to give LaSalle a little breathing room.

Garlitz hit on a layup to narrow the gap again, and with 18 seconds to go, Firlie was fouled by Larry McKenzie. After making his first shot, he and Garlitz exchanged words at the foul line, at which time referee Arnone stepped in to break it up. Firlie also made his second try, then headed for the bench.

Scaletta and Getty shot the technical fouls for their respective teams, and both players converted to make it 55-51. Phil Barbe closed out the scoring on a foul conversion with 13 seconds on the clock.

Scaletta, with seven field goals and 6-6 for at the charity stripe, gave Firlie a big assist in the scoring department. The two accounted for all but 11 of the Explorers' points. Garlitz and Getty were 1-2 in point-producing for the visitors, with 20 and 18 tallies, respectively.

Valley High Loses 56-51 To Explorers

Firlie Scores 25 Points, Scaletta, Garlitz Get 20

By TED TROXELL

Mike Firlie, LaSalle's brilliant backcourt man who has been a key figure in the fashioning of the Explorers' winning streak, last night led his team to a 56-51 victory over an upset-minded Valley High quint at SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium.

The usually hot shooting Irish were somewhat off their floor game, but cashed in on 18 of 21 foul attempts and got the major share of their scoring from Firlie and Mickey Scaletta in picking up their seventh straight win of the campaign. Valley's record now stands at two wins and three losses.

Firlie Rings Up 25

Firlie, who specializes in stealing the ball when the opponent is on the attack, pulled several timely thefts last night which he converted into scoring plays, and also hit with consistency from outside. He connected on nine of 16 tries from the floor and had a 7-8 night from the free throw line to wind up with 25 points.

Four of Firlie's foul conversions came in the last 37 seconds, when Valley was trying desperately to pull the game out of the fire after trailing all the way.

At one point in the final frame, the Cumberlanders led by a nine-point margin, but Bill Garlitz and Jimmy Getty hit hot streaks and began blistering the nets to pull the Lonaconing quint to within two points (50-48) with slightly less than a minute remaining.

This is when the battle really got hectic. Both clubs fouled frequently, and when a name-calling session developed between Firlie and Garlitz, referee Enordo "Moose" Arnone called a double technical foul and banished both players from the game.

Valley Trails By Two

In all, nine points were scored in the span of 54 seconds, all but two of them coming at the foul line. Garlitz converted one of two attempts to make the score 50-48, then Firlie came back with a pair of charity tosses to give LaSalle a little breathing room.

Garlitz hit on a layup to narrow the gap again, and with 18 seconds to go, Firlie was fouled by Larry McKenzie. After making his first shot, he and Garlitz exchanged words at the foul line, at which time referee Arnone stepped in to break it up. Firlie also made his second try, then headed for the bench.

Scaletta and Getty shot the technical fouls for their respective teams, and both players converted to make it 55-51. Phil Barbe closed out the scoring on a foul conversion with 13 seconds on the clock.

Scaletta, with seven field goals and 6-6 for at the charity stripe, gave Firlie a big assist in the scoring department. The two accounted for all but 11 of the Explorers' points. Garlitz and Getty were 1-2 in point-producing for the visitors, with 20 and 18 tallies, respectively.

Dallas-Fort Worth Gets Continental League Franchise

Texans Given 7th Berth In Baseball Loop

Cities 35 Miles Apart Planning New Park At Arlington

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Dallas and Fort Worth were granted the seventh franchise in the newly organized Continental League Tuesday.

The franchise was granted by Continental League President Branch Rickey to Fort Worth Publisher Amon Carter Jr. and J. W. Bateson, former owner of the Dallas Rangers of the American Association.

Final details are yet to be ironed out. The franchise is contingent on the building of a bi-county sports stadium, approved by voters in an election last Fall.

Presumably the ball park would be built in Arlington, a growing city between Fort Worth and Dallas, which are 35 miles apart but which are rapidly growing into one metropolitan area.

Rickey Breaks News

Rickey announced the awarding of the franchise shortly before boarding a plane for New York.

"On behalf of the franchise committee, I'm granting the seventh franchise in the Continental League to the Fort Worth area," Rickey told a hastily called press conference.

Rickey, Bateson, Carter, William A. Shea, head of a committee to bring another major league baseball team to New York, and Arlington Mayor Tommy Vandergriff attended the press conference.

Bateson and Carter issued this joint statement:

"We have accepted the opportunity and the challenge in behalf of Dallas and Fort Worth to insure major league baseball for our big league area by taking one of the last two franchises available in the Continental League.

"We believe Dallas - Fort Worth will never have another opportunity to have big league baseball and we have acted accordingly, confident that our sports-minded citizens will rally behind the Continental League as the No. 1 major league of the future."

The statements were interpreted to mean that Bateson and Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, have parctically guaranteed that financial arrangements for entry into the league will be met.

May Operate In 1961

Thus, Dallas - Fort Worth joins Houston, Denver, Atlanta, Toronto, Minneapolis - St. Paul and New York in the new league. Target date for operation is 1961.

Luis Rodriguez Is 8-5 Favortie

Cuban Will Fight Hart In Florida

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)— Luis Rodriguez, a 22-year-old Cuban with a powder-puff punch, an unbeaten string of 25 fights and designs on the welterweight title, was an 8-to-5 favorite today to defeat Sugar Hart of Philadelphia Wednesday night in a TV 10-round bout.

Their "elimination match" for a shot at Don Jordan's 147-pound championship will be nationally televised from the Miami Beach auditorium starting at 10 p.m. (e.s.t.).

A victory for Ridriguez would almost certainly earn him a shot at the title. Promoter Chris Dundee already has made Jordan's manager, Don Nesseth, a $50,000 offer for the champion to defend here later this winter against the winner of Wednesday night's fight.

In the present ratings, Rodriguez is No. 2 welterweight challenger behind Charley Scott. However, he stopped Scott last year in nine rounds and Scott was beaten by Bennie Paret in New York last Friday night.

Hart, who was rated the No. 1 welterweight challenger before he was knocked out by Scott in New York last month, also could qualify for a title shot with an impressive victory over Rodriquez. In 34 fights, Hart has 28 victories, 21 by knockouts. He has been beaten only four times and fought two draws.

Cohn Syndicate Buys Interest Of Rosensohn

New Group Acquires Johansson Contract

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Roy Cohn, a New York lawyer, told the New York State Athletic Commission Tuesday that his 10-man group had acquired 100 per cent control of the contract for the Ingemar Johansson-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title rematch and would apply for a license to promote the fight in New York.

Negotiations were completed Tuesday morning for Cohn's group to buy Bill Rosensohn's 33 1-3 per cent interest in the corporation that held the contract. No sum was mentioned but Rosensohn, happily confirming the sale, said he had received a "substantial payment."

The new group previously had bought the 66 2-3 per cent interest held by Vincent Velella, also a New York lawyer, in Feature Sports, Inc., formerly known as Rosensohn Enterprises, Inc. The promoter's license of Rosensohn Enterprises was revoked by the commission Nov. 6. Rosensohn also lost his matchmaker's license.

Humbert (Jack) Fugazy, 72-year-old promoter of the 1920s who will head the promotion, said he planned to leave Sunday night for Sweden to meet with Johansson, the world heavyweight boxing champion, and Edwin Ahlquist, his adviser.

Cohn is former counsel for the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's investigating subcommittee.

Rosensohn Enterprises ran into difficulties with the commission as result of an investigation of the first Patterson fight last June.

Underwood Says GOP To Carry State

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Cecil H. Underwood of West Virginia predicted after a conference with Vice President Richard M. Nixon Tuesday that Republicans will carry West Virginia next year.

Underwood, who conferred with New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller last month, said he is not committing himself at this time between the two potential rivals for the 1960 GOP presidential nomination.

The governor told reporters, however, that as of today Nixon is the "overwhelming choice" of West Virginia's Republicans. He noted that Nixon had visited the State regularly since he was a freshman congressman and that Rockefeller is little known here.

"I think the Republican Party is very fortunate to have two such outstanding men discussed for its presidential nomination," Underwood said. "I have encouraged both of them to visit the State. They have expressed interest but no dates have been set."

Underwood said he based his prediction of a 1960 Republican victory in West Virginia on the belief that economic conditions will improve there. He said he discussed with Nixon proposals for Federal-State cooperation to provide employment.

Previously Underwood had conferred with Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton and with Robert Miriam, an assistant to the president.

As a governor who cannot succeed himself, Underwood said he had not decided whether he will seek Republican senatorial nomination to oppose Democratic Sen. Jennings Randolph in 1960.

Underwood Says GOP To Carry State

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Cecil H. Underwood of West Virginia predicted after a conference with Vice President Richard M. Nixon Tuesday that Republicans will carry West Virginia next year.

Underwood, who conferred with New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller last month, said he is not committing himself at this time between the two potential rivals for the 1960 GOP presidential nomination.

The governor told reporters, however, that as of today Nixon is the "overwhelming choice" of West Virginia's Republicans. He noted that Nixon had visited the State regularly since he was a freshman congressman and that Rockefeller is little known here.

"I think the Republican Party is very fortunate to have two such outstanding men discussed for its presidential nomination," Underwood said. "I have encouraged both of them to visit the State. They have expressed interest but no dates have been set."

Underwood said he based his prediction of a 1960 Republican victory in West Virginia on the belief that economic conditions will improve there. He said he discussed with Nixon proposals for Federal-State cooperation to provide employment.

Previously Underwood had conferred with Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton and with Robert Miriam, an assistant to the president.

As a governor who cannot succeed himself, Underwood said he had not decided whether he will seek Republican senatorial nomination to oppose Democratic Sen. Jennings Randolph in 1960.

In Memoriam

In memory of Thornton E. Poole who died December 22, 1958.
God took Dad home, it was his will,
But in our hearts we love him still.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
We often sit and talk of him
When we are all at home
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by daughter
Audrey Heck

In loving memory of our beloved parents, George Albert and Elizabeth Eyler.
God took them home, it was his will,
But in our hearts we love them still;
Their memory is as dear today,
As in the hour they passed away,
We often sit and think of them
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Daughters, VIRGINIA, MARGARET, ELIZABETH, MARIE and MARYLAND

In loving memory of Norah L. Lease, who died Dec. 23, 1957.
Thru pain and sorrow she would never complain;
Always a smile and gentle word;
For the ones who on earth remain;
Her sweet voice will always be heard.
Sadly missed by The Family

In Memoriam

In memory of Thornton E. Poole who died December 22, 1958.
God took Dad home, it was his will,
But in our hearts we love him still.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
We often sit and talk of him
When we are all at home
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by daughter
Audrey Heck

In loving memory of our beloved parents, George Albert and Elizabeth Eyler.
God took them home, it was his will,
But in our hearts we love them still;
Their memory is as dear today,
As in the hour they passed away,
We often sit and think of them
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Daughters, VIRGINIA, MARGARET, ELIZABETH, MARIE and MARYLAND

In loving memory of Norah L. Lease, who died Dec. 23, 1957.
Thru pain and sorrow she would never complain;
Always a smile and gentle word;
For the ones who on earth remain;
Her sweet voice will always be heard.
Sadly missed by The Family

Pete Elliott Is Illinois Grid Mentor

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The first brother head coaching act in Big Ten football history was formed Tuesday when Pete Elliott, University of California coach, was appointed new coach at Illinois.

Elliott, 33, accepted the post vacated by retirement of Ray Eliot and becomes a conference coaching rival of his brother, Chalmers (Bump) Elliott, 34, who made his debut as Michigan's top coach last season.

The Elliotts were backfield mates on Michigan's undefeated 1947 Big Ten and Rose Bowl champion team and now will match strategy in the tradition-steeped Illinois vs. Michigan rivalry.

Pete Elliott, who had 10-21 record in three seasons as California's coach, is only the third Illinois coach in 47 years.

Eliot, who retired after an 18-season Illini regime, supplanted the famed Bob Zuppke, who had served 29 years. Eliot becomes assistant athletic director at Illinois.

Pete Elliott will inherit a fine corps of backfield men from 1958's Illini team which had 5-3-1 record and closed as perhaps the strongest team in the Big Ten with successive victories over Wisconsin and Northwestern.

Bump and Pete are the sons of the late Dr. Norman Elliott, of Bloomington, Ill., once on the athletic staff at Northwestern University.

"I shudder to think of the day when teams coached by Pete and Bump meet on the gridiron," Dr. Elliott said several years ago in what may have been a premonition of Tuesday's development.

Prior to moving to California, Pete served one year as head coach at Nebraska, five years as an aide to Bud Wilkinson at Oklahoma, and two years as an assistant at Oregon State.

Traditionally, the Illini coach coach works on a year-to-year contract. Elliott also will have status as an associate professor of physical education.

Pete Elliott Is Illinois Grid Mentor

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The first brother head coaching act in Big Ten football history was formed Tuesday when Pete Elliott, University of California coach, was appointed new coach at Illinois.

Elliott, 33, accepted the post vacated by retirement of Ray Eliot and becomes a conference coaching rival of his brother, Chalmers (Bump) Elliott, 34, who made his debut as Michigan's top coach last season.

The Elliotts were backfield mates on Michigan's undefeated 1947 Big Ten and Rose Bowl champion team and now will match strategy in the tradition-steeped Illinois vs. Michigan rivalry.

Pete Elliott, who had 10-21 record in three seasons as California's coach, is only the third Illinois coach in 47 years.

Eliot, who retired after an 18-season Illini regime, supplanted the famed Bob Zuppke, who had served 29 years. Eliot becomes assistant athletic director at Illinois.

Pete Elliott will inherit a fine corps of backfield men from 1958's Illini team which had 5-3-1 record and closed as perhaps the strongest team in the Big Ten with successive victories over Wisconsin and Northwestern.

Bump and Pete are the sons of the late Dr. Norman Elliott, of Bloomington, Ill., once on the athletic staff at Northwestern University.

"I shudder to think of the day when teams coached by Pete and Bump meet on the gridiron," Dr. Elliott said several years ago in what may have been a premonition of Tuesday's development.

Prior to moving to California, Pete served one year as head coach at Nebraska, five years as an aide to Bud Wilkinson at Oklahoma, and two years as an assistant at Oregon State.

Traditionally, the Illini coach coach works on a year-to-year contract. Elliott also will have status as an associate professor of physical education.

Meyersdale Raps Hyndman, 81-59

A strong Meyersdale High School team last night rolled to an easy 81-59 victory over the Hyndman High Hornets at Meyersdale.

Ed Younkin, Meyersdale forward, poured 24 points through the hoops to take scoring honors for the evening. Vohn Lehman paced Hyndman with 17 tallies, and Royce Waltman and Jim Arnold equally shared 26 markers.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The University of Cincinnati's No. 1 rated Bearcats shook loose from Bradley's Braves in the last half Tuesday night and registered an 86-71 basketball victory. Cincinnati's big Oscar Robertson scored 42 points.

Frostburg GOP Wins

The Frostburg Republican Club scored a 2-1 decision over the Cumberland Moose last night in the Allegany County Men's Shuffleboard League. Charles Broadwater's 16 was high for the G.O.P. and Art Jones led the Moose with 12.

Blank's Cops Two

Art Blank's Tavern won two out of three games from the Frostburg Legion last night in the Allegany County Men's Shuffleboard League match. Dick Robeson scored 20 points to place the winners while T. Stewart was high for the Legion with 21 tallies.

Stock Market Irregularly Lower; Trading Declines

NEW YORK (UPI)—Declines in blue chip industrials offset many good gains in issues outside those used to compile the averages, and the list finished irregularly lower.

As in the previous two sessions prices fell from their highs toward the close. It was a disappointing performance to many market experts who had expected the list to move toward new peak levels following Monday's developments in the business world.

Agreement by the steel companies to negotiate separately with the union, and optimistic forecasts for 1960 by two of the nation's top business leaders were thought to be the stimulants needed to push industrials past their Aug. 3 peak.

This failed to hold though, and trading even fell below the previous session. Sales amounted to 2,930,000 shares, compared with 3,290,000 the day before.

The Dow Jones industrial average was pulled down by losses of 2½ points in Goodyear, 2 in General Foods, 1⅞ in Union Carbide, 1½ in Westinghouse, 1¾ in DuPont and 1¼ in International Paper.

Electronics again were in the spotlight, featured by an 8-point gain in General Time. IBM jumped 6¾, while Texas Instruments fell 3¼.

Chicago Grains

CHICAGO (UPI) —Soybeans and rye were strong, but other grains were mostly steady Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

At the closing bell, wheat was off ¼ to up ¼; corn off ⅛ to up ⅛; oats off ¼ to up ⅛; rye up ¼ to 1½; and soybeans up 1⅜ to 1¾.

Wheat futures opened lower and showed little inclination to rally throughout the session. Commission houses sold early. There was small commercial buying. No export business was reported.

The government's impounding report, which was smaller than expected, brought early selling into wheat.

Corn prices were steady. Trade was slow and mixed. March was sold at $1.12 and May at $1.15½, but offers continued in ample volume. Receipts were small.

The Agriculture Department predicted Tuesday the 1960 spring pig crop will be 11 per cent smaller than the year before. Export subsidies were granted on 12,000 bushels of oats.

Oats futures were mostly steady. Some local longs sold out, and demand was limited.

Rye prices moved upward following several days of falling prices. Rye was lower at the start on liquidation.

Soybeans made wide price swings and closed strong. Support came from local traders and from higher meal prices. Commission houses sold. Trade was light.

Export circles reported that Holland, Italy and France bought soybeans.

Outside markets were mixed.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Stock Market Irregularly Lower; Trading Declines

NEW YORK (UPI)—Declines in blue chip industrials offset many good gains in issues outside those used to compile the averages, and the list finished irregularly lower.

As in the previous two sessions prices fell from their highs toward the close. It was a disappointing performance to many market experts who had expected the list to move toward new peak levels following Monday's developments in the business world.

Agreement by the steel companies to negotiate separately with the union, and optimistic forecasts for 1960 by two of the nation's top business leaders were thought to be the stimulants needed to push industrials past their Aug. 3 peak.

This failed to hold though, and trading even fell below the previous session. Sales amounted to 2,930,000 shares, compared with 3,290,000 the day before.

The Dow Jones industrial average was pulled down by losses of 2½ points in Goodyear, 2 in General Foods, 1⅞ in Union Carbide, 1½ in Westinghouse, 1¾ in DuPont and 1¼ in International Paper.

Electronics again were in the spotlight, featured by an 8-point gain in General Time. IBM jumped 6¾, while Texas Instruments fell 3¼.

Chicago Grains

CHICAGO (UPI) —Soybeans and rye were strong, but other grains were mostly steady Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

At the closing bell, wheat was off ¼ to up ¼; corn off ⅛ to up ⅛; oats off ¼ to up ⅛; rye up ¼ to 1½; and soybeans up 1⅜ to 1¾.

Wheat futures opened lower and showed little inclination to rally throughout the session. Commission houses sold early. There was small commercial buying. No export business was reported.

The government's impounding report, which was smaller than expected, brought early selling into wheat.

Corn prices were steady. Trade was slow and mixed. March was sold at $1.12 and May at $1.15½, but offers continued in ample volume. Receipts were small.

The Agriculture Department predicted Tuesday the 1960 spring pig crop will be 11 per cent smaller than the year before. Export subsidies were granted on 12,000 bushels of oats.

Oats futures were mostly steady. Some local longs sold out, and demand was limited.

Rye prices moved upward following several days of falling prices. Rye was lower at the start on liquidation.

Soybeans made wide price swings and closed strong. Support came from local traders and from higher meal prices. Commission houses sold. Trade was light.

Export circles reported that Holland, Italy and France bought soybeans.

Outside markets were mixed.

Christmas Mail Here Ahead Of 1958 Figure

Friday Deliveries Will Be Made

Within a few days the work load at the Cumberland Post Office and area post offices should be back to normal in the wake of the usual rush of Christmas mail and packages.

Thomas F. Conlon, postmaster, said yesterday that cancellations are running ahead of last year and last-minute cards and packages are being mailed to swell the overall figure.

This year during the period December 5 through December 21 there were 1,049,400 cancellations. The number for the same period in 1958 was 1,109,100, he added.

A peak figure in cancellations was reached on December 16, when there were 129,800. At least 100,000 cancellations are expected today.

This year the 100,000 cancellation mark was reached or surpassed on eight days, while last year five days' business showed cancellations over the 100,000 mark.

During the period December 5 through December 18 the number of packages coming into the Post Office here would make quite a large mountain of parcels—47,680. The number of packages forwarded out of the Post Office during the period was 42,472.

Postmaster Conlon said that late-arriving gift parcels and special delivery mail will be delivered on Christmas. Every piece of mail available for regular delivery tomorrow will be delivered on that day.

However there will be no window service or rural delivery on Christmas Day. Letters mailed today at the local Post Office with local destinations will be delivered in time for Christmas, the postmaster said.

Residents, he said, have cooperated with postal employes by getting their mailing done early.

Salvation Army Toys Examined

Russell G. Robeson, left, chairman of the Salvation Army Christmas toy committee, and Captain Fred Overton are shown examining some of the hundreds of toys which the Salvation Army is distributing to needy families for Christmas. The toy shop on the third floor of the Salvation Army Citadel was opened for the first time yesterday and will remain open today and tomorrow until all of the toys are distributed. Other members of the toy committee are Ernest Lindsay, Charles Stutzman and Stanley Zorick. Meanwhile, Captain Overton reported that contributions to the Christmas kettles now stand at over $3,500. Two Frostburg clubs, Rotary and Lions, reported collections of $222.59 and $123.50, respectively.

Guard Appeal Decision Still Is Indefinite

Gets 10 Years For Manslaughter

Attorneys for Ronald William (Pete) Guard, 52-year-old former constable of the Friendsville area, who was sentenced to 10 years in the Maryland Penitentiary yesterday in Garrett County Circuit Court after having been found guilty of manslaughter, apparently are still undecided as to whether to appeal the conviction to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The three judges of the Fourth Judicial Circuit returned their verdict in the Oakland courtroom after retiring to chambers for about 15 minutes following the closing argument yesterday morning.

Guard was found not guilty of second degree murder but received the stiffest sentence possible for manslaughter. His sentence starts from October 25, when he first was placed in the Garrett County Jail following the fatal shooting of George Raymond Schroyer, 40-year-old Friendsville tavern owner, shortly after midnight of Saturday, October 24.

Seeks Clemency

Associate Judge D. K. McLaughlin of Hagerstown announced the verdict in which Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris of Cumberland and Associate Judge Neil C. Fraley of Oakland had concurred. Before sentence was passed, W. Earle Cobey of Cumberland, one of the defense attorneys, asked for clemency for the former constable.

Mr. Cobey reminded the three judges that Guard is the sole support for his wife and six children. He also said that the former constable has been relieved of his law enforcement duties by the Garrett County commissioners. Finally, the local attorney said that Guard has expressed a willingness to move from Garrett County as a result of feeling against him which has developed.

State's Attorney W. Dwight Stover said he would oppose probation in this case, and immediately thereafter the Hagerstown jurist imposed the 10-year sentence. Guard seemed surprised at the severity of the sentence, and his wife, who had been sitting beside him throughout the two-day trial, broke down and wept.

Five Possible Verdicts

It was the fourth of five possible verdicts which the judges could have found.

Monday, the judges had granted a defense motion of not guilty of first degree murder which removed two of the possible verdicts. He could have been found guilty of first degree murder with the death penalty or with life imprisonment.

By the verdict yesterday they also found Guard not guilty of second degree murder which requires proof of malice. Manslaughter possesses the element of gross negligence in performing a lawful act.

The three judges of the Fourth Judicial Circuit retired to chambers at 10:38 a. m. after hearing slightly more than one hour of closing arguments on the part of four of the five contending attorneys.

State's Attorney Stover began the final argument promptly at 9:30 a. m. in which he asked the court for a verdict of guilty of second degree murder. He was followed by Lewis R. Jones of Oakland and Mr. Cobey, both attorneys for the defendant. The final argument was presented by Walter W. Dawson of Oakland, special assistant to Stover for this case, who concluded his 16 minute plea with the words the incident at Friendsville was "shocking and sorrowful."

E. Ray Jones of Oakland, the third defense attorney, did not argue.

Cold Front Settles In Tri-State

The tri-state area remained blanketed under a thin covering of snow in the wake of Monday's heavy storm as temperatures tumbled below freezing yesterday and threatened to go even lower today.

State Police reported most of the highways in Allegany and Garrett counties clear last night, although they said some icy spots were scattered over the area roads.

The cold blast blowing over Maryland kept the white blanket on the ground leaving as much as three inches of snow in some sections.

The cold blast over Maryland kept the white blanket on the ground, leaving as much as three inches of snow in some sections.

Yesterday was clear and cold throughout Western Maryland and parts of adjoining West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The mercury dropped to a low of 16 degrees yesterday, rising to a high of only 27, despite a brightly shining sun.

Forecast for today is for continued cold as two low pressure areas are moving in from the south and picking up moisture along the way. High will be in the low 20s.

A White Christmas is predicted as more snow is expected Thursday or Friday.

Commission On Representation Makes Changes

Report Submitted To Gov. Tawes

BALTIMORE (AP)—The governor's commission on more equitable representation in the Maryland Legislature met here briefly Tuesday.

Newsmen were barred from the session, which an informed source said lasted about 45 minutes and involved some changes in the commission's report of last October. Recommendations in the report already have been rejected by a 12-5 vote of the Legislative Council, interim screening arm of the Legislature.

Commission members were reported concerned over the council action, which could adversely affect the commission's chances of obtaining approval of its recommendations in the Legislature next February.

Walsh Heads Group

Commission Chairman William C. Walsh told newsmen the matters discussed at Tuesday's meeting would be reported to Gov. Tawes and any further information would have to come from the governor.

Under the commission's proposals, the membership of the House of Delegates could be increased from the present 123 to a maximum of 141, depending on population growth in the 23 counties. Baltimore City would retain its present 42 seats and the 29-seat Senate would remain unchanged, with the city keeping six seats and each of the 23 counties retaining one.

The commission recommended that no county be stripped of any House seats but that provisions be made to increase the representation of growing counties. Baltimore County, with an expected population of 465,000 in 1960, would add four seats to its present six, for example. Prince Georges, with a forecast population of 370,000 by next year, and Montgomery, with 325,000, would gain two each to the six each they now have. Anne Arundel would add one to its present six.

The Formula

Under the commission formula, a county which now has two delegates would be entitled to three when its population reached 50,000; a county with three would get four when its population grew to 75,000; a county with four would get five when its population grew to 100,000; a county with five would get six when its population reached 150,000; a county with six would get seven when its population reached 200,000; a county with seven would get eight at the 300,000 population mark; a county with eight would get nine at 400,000, and a county with more than 500,000 would get the maximum of 10 delegates.

Two Identical $15,000 Suits Filed In Court

Kelly Boulevard Crash Involved

Two young men who were injured in an accident on Kelly Boulevard while en route to work at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company yesterday filed almost identical $15,000 damage suits in Allegany County Circuit Court.

The $15,000 actions were filed for Victor F. Merkel, 20, of 306 Mountain View Drive, and Paul H. Davis, 22, of 315 Broadway, by Attorneys Donald W. Mason and James S. Getty. Defendants in both suits are William A. B. Liller Sr. and William A. B. Liller Jr., both of Baltimore Pike, and James P. Blank of Cresaptown.

Both Merkel and Davis assert in their declarations that they sustained fractured right ankles, lacerations of the face and abrasions of the arms and legs. The accident occurred about 2:30 p. m. July 31.

The plaintiffs state that they were both passengers in an automobile owned by the elder Liller and driven by his son and that this vehicle and another car owned and operated by Blank were both headed in a southerly direction on Kelly Boulevard.

Both declarations stated that Blank speeded up when the younger Liller attempted to pass him. As a result, the Liller car struck the abutment at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad underpass, they said. Both drivers were responsible, the declarations say.

Rabbit Hunters Warned Of Tularemia Dangers

The State Health Department is warning hunters and housewives of the danger of contracting tularemia from skinning and dressing wild rabbits.

Two cases of the disease have already been reported in Baltimore this year, according to Dr. Ton van Strien, county health officer.

Prevention of tularemia, he said, is simple and calls for one to wear gloves while skinning and dressing rabbits. Hands should be washed thoroughly with soap and water even though only the fur is touched. Scratches and abrasions should be treated with a disinfectant.

There is no danger of getting tularemia from eating rabbit which is thoroughly cooked, the health officer said.

The illness begins suddenly, usually within a few days after one has handled an infected animal. Headache, chills, fever, aches and pains and great weakness are the most frequent symptoms. A sore develops at the site of the infection and nearby glands become enlarged and tender.

Dr. van Strien said that in case of illness, one should see his family doctor and tell him of the exposure to the animals.

Wild rabbits are the most common source of the disease. No human cases have been traced to domestic rabbits.

State Hearing Clinic Survey Is Under Way

Dr. Donald F. Proctor, Baltimore, a member of the staff of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, visited the Allegany County Health Department this week to study the records of the department's hearing conservation program.

An ear and throat specialist, he was asked by the State Health Department to make a survey of hearing clinics in Maryland.

Maryland, officials said, is one of the states which pioneered in hearing conservation services and is still one of the few states which offers such a service on a statewide basis.

The Health Department here has for years offered hearing clinic services in charge of a member of the Johns Hopkins staff.

Most of those attending the semi-monthly clinics are school children recommended following tests performed in the schools by a technician employed by the Board of Education.

Recommendations or limited treatment, including radium, is provided in the clinics for about 500 youngsters each year. Other treatment, including tonsillectomies, is arranged by the Health Deparment.

Christmas Mail Here Ahead Of 1958 Figure

Friday Deliveries Will Be Made

Within a few days the work load at the Cumberland Post Office and area post offices should be back to normal in the wake of the usual rush of Christmas mail and packages.

Thomas F. Conlon, postmaster, said yesterday that cancellations are running ahead of last year and last-minute cards and packages are being mailed to swell the overall figure.

This year during the period December 5 through December 21 there were 1,049,400 cancellations. The number for the same period in 1958 was 1,109,100, he added.

A peak figure in cancellations was reached on December 16, when there were 129,800. At least 100,000 cancellations are expected today.

This year the 100,000 cancellation mark was reached or surpassed on eight days, while last year five days' business showed cancellations over the 100,000 mark.

During the period December 5 through December 18 the number of packages coming into the Post Office here would make quite a large mountain of parcels—47,680. The number of packages forwarded out of the Post Office during the period was 42,472.

Postmaster Conlon said that late-arriving gift parcels and special delivery mail will be delivered on Christmas. Every piece of mail available for regular delivery tomorrow will be delivered on that day.

However there will be no window service or rural delivery on Christmas Day. Letters mailed today at the local Post Office with local destinations will be delivered in time for Christmas, the postmaster said.

Residents, he said, have cooperated with postal employes by getting their mailing done early.

Two Frostburg clubs, Rotary and Lions, reported collections of $222.59 and $123.50, respectively.

Guard Appeal Decision Still Is Indefinite

Gets 10 Years For Manslaughter

Attorneys for Ronald William (Pete) Guard, 52-year-old former constable of the Friendsville area, who was sentenced to 10 years in the Maryland Penitentiary yesterday in Garrett County Circuit Court after having been found guilty of manslaughter, apparently are still undecided as to whether to appeal the conviction to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The three judges of the Fourth Judicial Circuit returned their verdict in the Oakland courtroom after retiring to chambers for about 15 minutes following the closing argument yesterday morning.

Guard was found not guilty of second degree murder but received the stiffest sentence possible for manslaughter. His sentence starts from October 25, when he first was placed in the Garrett County Jail following the fatal shooting of George Raymond Schroyer, 40-year-old Friendsville tavern owner, shortly after midnight of Saturday, October 24.

Seeks Clemency

Associate Judge D. K. McLaughlin of Hagerstown announced the verdict in which Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris of Cumberland and Associate Judge Neil C. Fraley of Oakland had concurred. Before sentence was passed, W. Earle Cobey of Cumberland, one of the defense attorneys, asked for clemency for the former constable.

Mr. Cobey reminded the three judges that Guard is the sole support for his wife and six children. He also said that the former constable has been relieved of his law enforcement duties by the Garrett County commissioners. Finally, the local attorney said that Guard has expressed a willingness to move from Garrett County as a result of feeling against him which has developed.

State's Attorney W. Dwight Stover said he would oppose probation in this case, and immediately thereafter the Hagerstown jurist imposed the 10-year sentence. Guard seemed surprised at the severity of the sentence, and his wife, who had been sitting beside him throughout the two-day trial, broke down and wept.

Five Possible Verdicts

It was the fourth of five possible verdicts which the judges could have found.

Monday, the judges had granted a defense motion of not guilty of first degree murder which removed two of the possible verdicts. He could have been found guilty of first degree murder with the death penalty or with life imprisonment.

By the verdict yesterday they also found Guard not guilty of second degree murder which requires proof of malice. Manslaughter possesses the element of gross negligence in performing a lawful act.

The three judges of the Fourth Judicial Circuit retired to chambers at 10:38 a. m. after hearing slightly more than one hour of closing arguments on the part of four of the five contending attorneys.

State's Attorney Stover began the final argument promptly at 9:30 a. m. in which he asked the court for a verdict of guilty of second degree murder. He was followed by Lewis R. Jones of Oakland and Mr. Cobey, both attorneys for the defendant. The final argument was presented by Walter W. Dawson of Oakland, special assistant to Stover for this case, who concluded his 16 minute plea with the words the incident at Friendsville was "shocking and sorrowful."

E. Ray Jones of Oakland, the third defense attorney, did not argue.

Cold Front Settles In Tri-State

The tri-state area remained blanketed under a thin covering of snow in the wake of Monday's heavy storm as temperatures tumbled below freezing yesterday and threatened to go even lower today.

State Police reported most of the highways in Allegany and Garrett counties clear last night, although they said some icy spots were scattered over the area roads.

The cold blast blowing over Maryland kept the white blanket on the ground leaving as much as three inches of snow in some sections.

The cold blast over Maryland kept the white blanket on the ground, leaving as much as three inches of snow in some sections.

Yesterday was clear and cold throughout Western Maryland and parts of adjoining West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The mercury dropped to a low of 16 degrees yesterday, rising to a high of only 27, despite a brightly shining sun.

Forecast for today is for continued cold as two low pressure areas are moving in from the south and picking up moisture along the way. High will be in the low 20s.

A White Christmas is predicted as more snow is expected Thursday or Friday.

Commission On Representation Makes Changes

Report Submitted To Gov. Tawes

BALTIMORE (AP)—The governor's commission on more equitable representation in the Maryland Legislature met here briefly Tuesday.

Newsmen were barred from the session, which an informed source said lasted about 45 minutes and involved some changes in the commission's report of last October. Recommendations in the report already have been rejected by a 12-5 vote of the Legislative Council, interim screening arm of the Legislature.

Commission members were reported concerned over the council action, which could adversely affect the commission's chances of obtaining approval of its recommendations in the Legislature next February.

Walsh Heads Group

Commission Chairman William C. Walsh told newsmen the matters discussed at Tuesday's meeting would be reported to Gov. Tawes and any further information would have to come from the governor.

Under the commission's proposals, the membership of the House of Delegates could be increased from the present 123 to a maximum of 141, depending on population growth in the 23 counties. Baltimore City would retain its present 42 seats and the 29-seat Senate would remain unchanged, with the city keeping six seats and each of the 23 counties retaining one.

The commission recommended that no county be stripped of any House seats but that provisions be made to increase the representation of growing counties. Baltimore County, with an expected population of 465,000 in 1960, would add four seats to its present six, for example. Prince Georges, with a forecast population of 370,000 by next year, and Montgomery, with 325,000, would gain two each to the six each they now have. Anne Arundel would add one to its present six.

The Formula

Under the commission formula, a county which now has two delegates would be entitled to three when its population reached 50,000; a county with three would get four when its population grew to 75,000; a county with four would get five when its population grew to 100,000; a county with five would get six when its population reached 150,000; a county with six would get seven when its population reached 200,000; a county with seven would get eight at the 300,000 population mark; a county with eight would get nine at 400,000, and a county with more than 500,000 would get the maximum of 10 delegates.

Two Identical $15,000 Suits Filed In Court

Kelly Boulevard Crash Involved

Two young men who were injured in an accident on Kelly Boulevard while en route to work at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company yesterday filed almost identical $15,000 damage suits in Allegany County Circuit Court.

The $15,000 actions were filed for Victor F. Merkel, 20, of 306 Mountain View Drive, and Paul H. Davis, 22, of 315 Broadway, by Attorneys Donald W. Mason and James S. Getty. Defendants in both suits are William A. B. Liller Sr. and William A. B. Liller Jr., both of Baltimore Pike, and James P. Blank of Cresaptown.

Both Merkel and Davis assert in their declarations that they sustained fractured right ankles, lacerations of the face and abrasions of the arms and legs. The accident occurred about 2:30 p. m. July 31.

The plaintiffs state that they were both passengers in an automobile owned by the elder Liller and driven by his son and that this vehicle and another car owned and operated by Blank were both headed in a southerly direction on Kelly Boulevard.

Both declarations stated that Blank speeded up when the younger Liller attempted to pass him. As a result, the Liller car struck the abutment at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad underpass, they said. Both drivers were responsible, the declarations say.

Rabbit Hunters Warned Of Tularemia Dangers

The State Health Department is warning hunters and housewives of the danger of contracting tularemia from skinning and dressing wild rabbits.

Two cases of the disease have already been reported in Baltimore this year, according to Dr. Ton van Strien, county health officer.

Prevention of tularemia, he said, is simple and calls for one to wear gloves while skinning and dressing rabbits. Hands should be washed thoroughly with soap and water even though only the fur is touched. Scratches and abrasions should be treated with a disinfectant.

There is no danger of getting tularemia from eating rabbit which is thoroughly cooked, the health officer said.

The illness begins suddenly, usually within a few days after one has handled an infected animal. Headache, chills, fever, aches and pains and great weakness are the most frequent symptoms. A sore develops at the site of the infection and nearby glands become enlarged and tender.

Dr. van Strien said that in case of illness, one should see his family doctor and tell him of the exposure to the animals.

Wild rabbits are the most common source of the disease. No human cases have been traced to domestic rabbits.
